The Existentialist

Jack R Ernest

Your obsession to be proved right is merely a confession of your scepticism. Certainty is humble, doubt is loud.

We tend to focus of the flaws of the perpetrator whilst ignoring those of the victim.

If you are feeling the pressure, you at least know you are doing something worthwhile.

People are only happy for you when you are as miserable as they are.

Sometimes the good luck is the bad luck.

Hate your past if only so you wont your future.

To be understood takes years of humiliation.

While you are busy debating, someone on the other side of the world is busy doing.

To be good when you have been treated horribly, that is most difficult to accomplish.

So long as you convince yourself that you are intelligent, you are anything but.

You are not going to live as though you are in heaven. Therefore, you must find some solace in hell.

The saint with regrets suffers as much in heaven as the sinner does in hell.

To die alone must be the worst punishment in life.

Utopia is something we all want, yet no one gets.

We exist because of chance. We don't exist because of it also.

It is very easy to send someone you have never even met off to the battlefield to be blown to smithereens.

To understand the strategy you must understand what is at stake.

Where interests overlap, alliances become negotiable.

With every renaissance comes its resistance.

Memory is one of the most unbearable things about existence.

This is difficult to understand. But you want to get to a place where you don't share your opinion on the subject at hand.

Maturity is a terrible price to pay for growing up.

It is only the dying that understand what matters.

Every collapse happens gradually at first and then suddenly.

A grifter is still a grifter despite how nice they appear.

A city full of surveillance cameras, is not a good thing.

If your motivation for life is to out compete those that hurt you, you will never find peace.

If you want to devote your life to complaining, that is your prerogative. But in the kindest possible terms you will only waste what you have been given.

The rich are trying to live. Everyone else is trying to survive.

If you were at work and saw people being fired for saying the sky is blue instead of green, I can guarantee you, that you would then say the sky is green as a result. This is in effect what motivates us in life. It is what pays the bills that determines the policy, not what is true.

You may think that one is a million is crazy odds, yet there are 8.4 billion people on the planet.

You can look at your bank account and marvel, but you forget that there is no ATM in your coffin.

If you are irrational, you can see the bubble happening. But most of society are rational.

Everyone has their moment, but not everyone takes it.

The end may come slowly, but it is coming.

Very few are prepared to accept society for what it is and will become.

There is a negative label for everything bar the heterosexual relationship - that is why we do what we do in life.

We all dream of a grandiose future, but the future only brings us closer to death.

"What do we do then?" is the expression that is uttered every day for every week for the eternity of society.

Life is what you do with what happened to you - good or bad.

If you live by the credo that we should imprison to save another, well the streets will be empty pretty soon.

Is your opinion one of fact or are you paid to have it? That is what always should be determined in one.

You live in the world, not an ideal one.

You can buy lots of things in life, but not your past.

The richest man in the world is one who doesn't care about money.

The only thing worst than dying is being unable to.

To never be satisfied, is a very dangerous position.

It is life that kills you, not death.

It takes more than an education to be educated.

Never turn your back on the future.

Life continuously surprises us - things are being done at the very moment others say they cannot be done.

Accepting your fate also by default means accepting your mistakes.

Be very careful for what punishment you want for the criminals of your society. As Europe in the 20th century showed, you must be very careful indeed.

A broken theory that performs is still a beautiful one.

For most in society they get so used to the steel bars that after a while they no longer notice them.

Outrage is cliched. Accepting the world for what it is, isn't.

When you are worth millions, you don't have to worry about your social skills.

It’s not the big that eats the small, but the fast that eats the slow.

Every choice has its price. Progress is never free in society.

Good social skills are for those that have nothing else.

It is not healthy to overthink about what the neighbourhood thinks of you.

No amount of money will do when your time has come.

Every morning is a tragedy and every sunset a resurrection.

Luck is out of your hands. At best you can only choose how you respond to it.

Society is as such, that the best rarely happens, but the worst never happens.

Who needs tomorrow, when you have all to live for today.

What we learn from life is that we never learn.

Being who you are always means disappointing some.

You want to be in a position in life such that others will delight in seeing you fail.

What escapes one is that everyday they find something to complain about as though the world should be perfect.

It is easy to roll the dice on someone else's money.

Not everyone makes it. But that doesn't mean you cannot be happy in life.

Life goes on when you are asleep. Even more so when you are awake.

We all have the same dreams. But what we worry about says so much about us.

The same society that lauds you, can turn on you if you give them the opportunity to do so.

When there is a crisis, everyone becomes an expert.

The key to being a winner in life is to hate failure more than you love success.

If you are hoping for everyone to behave rationally, you will be spectacularly disappointed every day.

An ordinary society is the ordinary persons nightmare.

What every country on the planet shares in common is that they are all constrained by one thing - the balance sheet.

We would only live if we knew the exact moment we would die.

You must be able to forgive because it is a self-danger to be unable to.

When the intellectual flatters you, you tend to pay more attention to him.

So long as you believe that those that contradict you are wrong, you have a lot of maturing to do.

Regret is maturities collateral.

Turn to god for certainty in a deal, but for a quick one you must do business with the devil.

The best leaders are the ones quickly forgotten after they leave office.

It is when we are applauded that we get greedy.

When we don't like someone, we tend to unleash to adjectives to hurt them.

To grow old is a tragedy - to grow old together, a privilege.

The revolution you want is never the revolution you get.

The only thing worst than leading a clown is to be led by him.

The two things that are a given in society are stupidity and uncertainty - now profit from this.

What do we believe in life? We believe in whatever pays the mortgage.

You are only ever an expert in what you have learned. Try to be humble enough to admit you don't know everything.

You cannot inspire one section of society without damaging another section.

There is probably another version of you in some parallel universe, with opposite views on society that you hold, and who also is absolutely certain he is correct.

Man has a terrible tendency to side with the executioner and then call himself a genius.

You don't have to be smarter than everyone alive - no one is. You just have to be marginally smarter than everyone else in the room.

The way to live a long life is to enjoy a boring one.

Stupidity does more harm to society than cruelty.

There is no hope for you in life, if the other side is considered mad, whilst your side just so happens to be "the beacon of truth." There are two truths in every debate - two falsifications too.

Your current self is always your best self, as it is true of society also.

It is madness to become comfortable with the idea of madness.

One is never as saintly as they convince themselves to be.

If you don't even know you, how can others!

You are limited by how much you can learn in your life time.

The goal isn't to be right. The goal is to make money.

You should never listen to someone that has a mortgage to pay. They cannot tell the truth.

Those that vote based on smiles are nearly always disappointed by what they get.

It is more dangerous to the self to be a perfect person rather than a good one.

We are all in the results industry, the devil included.

In a perfect society, the streets would be empty.

Maturity sometimes means saying you were wrong.

You cannot tell the truth. You have bills to pay and children to feed. If you lose your job, you become homeless and your family starves. Thus you must peddle whatever lie is about and they change from decade to decade. So who then can tell the truth? Only those who are financially comfortable. That is who you should listen to. Truth is a luxury only the wealthy can afford.

The most terrible leaders are the ones you keep guessing as to "what next!"

The battlefields most brutal tend to wear suits and ties.

To be immortal would be to sacrifice the risk of it all.

No deal with the devil is ever simple.

To make man adore you, beguile him - tell him where he is going wrong in life.

The famous are judged by people who are worse in private.

In politics promises are so cheap they have zero interest rates.

We always agree with the madness until we get called mad.

When one buys the lotto ticket, they don't picture themselves overjoyed at not winning. This is why the divorce rate is so high in the west.

Good intentions don't always yield ideal results.

Sometimes success is often as difficult to bear than failure.

I despise those that are sure they know it all.

If you expect society to be perfect, you will not make for a just leader.

Not everything is a lesson in life, sometimes you are just unlucky.

Life is fair because we all die, but unfair because we don't get to choose how.

If you listened to the intellectuals, the world should have ended 2 million years ago.

Sometimes the best advice that can be given is "get over it."

You don't want to live in a world where responsibility loses out to bureaucracy.

If you want to make millions, you must pander to the miserable.

No cult leader gains a following by telling people what is right with the world.

Facts don't lie, people do.

Man would rather be happily miserable than happy alone.

Man is born knowing everything and it takes a lifetime to realize how ignorant he is, if he does.

If you could buy the same things in prison as you can while free, you would not say you were incarcerated. Consumerism is our sedative.

Justice must be left to the wise, because if it were left to us, we would all imprison each other.

It is only when you are terminally ill that you will realize time is more precious than money.

The most dangerous leader in the world is one that doesn't listen.

You may have your system, but I can guarantee it wont yield the utopia you dream of.

It is often more dangerous to be a loyal friend of the elite than their arch nemesis.

The governments of any tyranny know full well they should always brutalise their citizens so they will accept something a bit less than this, which is oppression.

Those that have only known suffering don't know what freedom is.

Those raised in wealth, don't realize their advantages, and even if they do, seldom are they grateful for it.

Every generation thinks they have it the worst.

If I wanted to create a most dystopian society, I would construct in such a way that everyone was delightfully happy.

To understand ones position on the topic at hand, you must understand that they much like you have a family to feed and bills to pay.

Those looking to be victorious, are always the easiest to be manipulated by the intellectuals.

Bad choices have terrible consequences which themselves have terrible hardships.

When life is brilliant a week is too short. But when life is a burden, an hour feels like an eternity.

Sometimes the best response in life is to take the hit and move on with your life.

Mass hysteria is when you have a delusion that is shared by the whole city.

The best way to make money today is to have told the people that yesterday that the world would end today.

To appreciate stability, the world must go mad from time to time, and it does.

We think that the good times should never end and that the bad times never will.

The only thing worse than facing the executioners axe, is when it is the victim himself holding it.

There is no kind way to tell someone that they are a puppet, that their thoughts are someone else's.

How many times throughout history have the victims become those they hate.

Sometimes what you want and what you get are polar opposites.

Society is diverse - they are many who agree with you, but also many who disagree with you. That doesn't make you right and they wrong, and vice versa.

When the cult leader tells you that you are a genius for agreeing with him, you understandably don't dare contradict him.

If people don't know what freedom is, then they would actually seek to claim it. This is what the authoritarian regime does so effectively.

The first rule of sociology should be that there is no utopia. But the mob tends to dismiss this first rule.

It is very hard after success, more success and lots of success, to be cognizant of your ignorance.

There are no winners between two people who believe they hold a monopoly on what's right.

Being ignorant and realizing it are two different things.

Those who don't know much about anything, are always the first to say more needs to be done.

Most of the mob mistake feeling for thinking.

A patriot to one is always a terrorist to someone else.

The Buffalo Bills lost four Super Bowls in a row - people label them a team of losers for this. They forget though that the Bills are the only team ever to reach four Super Bowls in a row. Success doesn't always mean being the winner in life.

Everyone has one terrible mistake in them. Lets hope its not too terrible.

The only equitable world is one which is not equal.

Count how many people that are convinced that utopia is feasible, if you only did it their way.

The possessed tend to believe whatever conspiracy suits their agenda.

It is only when society goes insane do we appreciate what we had.

You have many wishes now, but when you are dying you will only have one: more time.

When you keep the masses entertained, they tend to ignore their shackles.

One is neither as good or as bad as you believe them to be.

You are too busy to critically think. Your first third of the day is spent asleep, the following third is spent working and the final third is spent watching tv. Thus you don't have time to hone your thought process. So what then do you do? Simple, you listen to whoever calls you a genius and make that your "critical thinking."

Every economic crisis has its losers, but also its winners.

It is easy to hold your partners hand when it is sunny. The true question is can you do it when there is a snow storm.

We are all ignorant. The genius is the one that knows it.

Peace is built on accountability not loyalty.

The best parents put their children's futures above everything else.

The trick in life is to enjoy the bad times as you would the good times.

The healthy society is a fundamentally flawed one. This however cannot be accepted by the fundamentally flawed individual.

If you want someone who blows you away, go see a Hollywood movie, or else take cocaine. The real world is boring.

If you want to know a countries future, look at who keeps it functional - workers and engineers or lawyers and the police.

You would have to call into question those who believe they could run a country exceptionally.

We only to argue what we know is not true. Nobody argues whether the sun will rise tomorrow - its a mathematical certainty that it will. But if there is doubt in the argument, we will figuratively die to deny it.

There is an ocean of maturity to be claimed, but you must be prepared to leave the safety of the shore.

The assumption behind the criticism of anyone, from a politician to a sports commentator, is that if we were in their very same position, we would be universally adored. This is false.

There is no hope for one in this world who wants to live a life such that they metaphorically win the lotto every day.

You have to reach a stage of maturity whereby you recognize that what you suggest or propose, probably wouldn't be better than what already is.

Is one smart enough to figure out how unsmart they are? That is what they should aim for.

Death is the only certainty in life.

What one desires is a conspiracy for why the world is the way it is. And when they get it, they call it the truth.

Things is life are never so bad as such that they cannot get worse.

The change in society you want is never the change you get.

Your past either makes you or it kills you.

You cannot find yourself unless you are first of all lost.

When a ruler is busy in one theatre, his rivals rehearse in a different one.

The global economy is always in one of two stages, either the sun is setting and the darkness is coming, or the dawn is on the horizon.

The man that is paid to argue, will do precisely that. And he is the most terrible person to debate because of it.

Every invading army has its enemies that haven't even been born yet.

The fact that you are not a lawyer, yet can recite the law, is a terrible indictment of your character.

The "whats wrong with me" crowd, don't know how to live.

Your goal in life should be to see beyond the cult you are in. And believe me, you are part of one.

Life never goes as planned. We have a term for this - its called Life.

Those possessed by ideology always perceive themselves as the victims.

Life is flawed. To survive it is to deal with this.

You spend your childhood being brainwashed. To mature is to spend your adulthood undoing it.

Most are not intelligent enough to not be a prisoner to their own personality.

When you are driven by the dopamine, you tend to do irrational things.

What is most dangerous for a country is to believe it cannot run out of money.

We all have our mistakes - the question is whether we are famous enough or not. The difference between us is the size of the audience looking at us.

Reality and ideology are not necessarily the same.

For any country to be free, it first must be feared.

There is no way to live that actually works 100%. It is actually all about compromise.

The way to live a long existence, is to ruminate on how it could all go wrong.

Libido is a very ungrateful thing.

Conduct yourself in life as though you will be as famous as the gods someday.

If we lived in a society where we were all famous, we would never leave the house.

We tend to put our best life on social media, not our real life.

What god shares with the devil is that both are only interested in one thing - their survival.

The dumbest person in the room is everyone in the room. The moral therefore is don't be in rooms with large gatherings.

The poor have got it into their heads, that if you just punished the rich, all would be perfect, which it wouldn't.

The worst cruelty is the cruelty that disguises itself as kindness.

Choose your prophet wisely, or best of all, don't choose any of them.

If you could actually critically think, you would see that every day has the crisis of the decade, and yet life moves forward.

It is fascinating to see just how the possessed convince themselves that they possess the truth, how they effectively brainwash themselves, and are blind to this.

There is a fortune to be claimed off the travesties of others.

The best cult is one you are sure you are not in it.

It is a long lonely crusade trying to be right all the time.

Everyone is outraged that everyone else isn't as perfect as they are.

We are all dying. Its merely a question of who is dying quicker.

To be kind requires a certain level of maturity - this is why so many lack it.

Life is unusual, as it is a game we all play, yet has no winners.

Life repeats itself for everyone, but the fools don't notice.

If a leader is willing to send his own son to the battlefields, then that war is necessary.

No one can do the job perfectly. It is therefore a question of how much they can do given the circumstance. Conception and execution are two different things.

What is necessary to understand about the political discourse, is that both can be wrong, but both can never be both right.

It is brutality that makes one believe in the gods that will "liberate" them.

If you accept that the sun will rise, then you must also accept the darkness in this world and that it will come.

A countries demise is seldom quick - it usually takes place over decades.

Those that cannot escape the past forfeit the present.

What you need in life is something to worry about so much that you don't worry about being unhappy.

One is the sum of their errors.

Everyone is an expert until they meet the expert.

It is unfortunately very easy to think yourself a genius when surrounded by idiots.

Which catches your attention more - that life is boring and change takes decades, or that the world will end tomorrow? It is a rhetorical question.

Sacrifice should be conditional on whether the ruler is willing to do the same.

You get the world as is, not as you demand it to be.

Empires only collapse when the lie stops working.

It is your prerogative not to be stupid, but if others are, then that's their problem.

What is certain is outrage - every second, of every hour, of every day. Thus if you are smart, you don't partake in it, when you can profit off it. When the idiots are not holding guns, they are holding pens. Meanwhile the wealthy hedge their bets on this certainty.

Never forget where you came from. Never doubt where you are going.

You can tell how free a society is by the character of those in their prisons.

The best skill you can possess is to stay positive while the world is burning.

We waste our lives searching for people who will agree with us.

It is better to go to hell than heaven, if the people you don't like are in the latter.

The way to be popular with the mob is to continuously proclaim that change is needed.

If you take from a man, he will hunt you. But if you entertain him and then take from him, the same man will adore you.

It is difficult to have a perfect future, but impossible to have a perfect past.

Your bills to pay - that is your guvnor - that is who decides what you think.

If you are their equal or less, you will be very popular with the mob.

When the apocalypse does come, it will judge us all equally.

Everyone dies, but the tragedy is that not everyone lives.

We all fear being known. We just react differently to it.

Even if we did society your way, it would probably be worst than what presently exists.

In order to appreciate one hour, we would have to be dead for twenty-three of them.

It is one thing to know about the various genocides. It is another thing to know that millions have supported them.

The most dangerous man is one that doesn't care.

What is certain is that we are always living in uncertain times.

If you expect a utopia, you will wake up disappointed every day.

To mature you must get bored with being right all the time.

Most people are too busy to understand that society should not be perfect.

The cruel person believes society can be lawed into utopia - the truly evil believe it can be punished into one.

Between two difficult decisions, choose the one that doesn't kill you the quickest.

The mob may be slaves to the rulers, but both are slaves to economics.

Talking about progress is not making progress.

To know what you will regret before you have made the choice is a great advantage to have.

Failure is often the better teacher than success, for at least it can be overcome.

Everything has its risks, including playing it safe.

The mob don't want the truth, they want to be entertained.

You are only as lost as you believe yourself to be.

Putting profits before ethics is not a clever thing to do.

Wars are much easier to start than stop.

Two commentators are both asked what makes a great golfer - one says it is how he positions his hands, his legs, his eyes etc. the other simply says I judge him on where the ball lands. The latter is how one should be measured in life.

The problem with society is that 99.999 percent of it are sure they are right on the matter at hand.

The bad in the world catches our attention more than its good.

Freedom is something that no knows what it is and therefore cannot actually be acquired.

Never be afraid to get up, storm out and bang the door shut, when you feel you are being taken advantage of.

Money must always be ones servant and not their master.

To understand the devil you must understand what motivates him.

To grow old together is a privilege.

No matter how much you live, it will never suffice. One is condemned as human to die with regrets.

You will never be satisfied in life, if all you expect is a utopia.

Stability is boring, but we dearly miss this ennui when war breaks out.

Keep giving out about those in charge - that will garner you millions of adoring fools.

In any battle, the disadvantaged need to win, while those with an advantage only need to survive.

We all live in the same world, we just look at it differently.

If we were on trial for our thoughts, we would all be put on the sex offenders registry for life.

The best highs are ones you don't realize you are chasing.

There is not even enough parallel universes out there to satisfy us all. Thus we must make do with what we have.

It is not just those that take your money that you should look at, but also those you willingly give your money to.

No intellectual gains millions of followers by saying they are wrong.

AI may cure cancer, but it will never cure greed.

It is a lot harder to convince yourself of your ignorance than your genius.

Opportunity is perhaps the best thing you can give someone.

We always live in exciting times.

Society will always be wrong so long as you expect it not to be.

Does one not ever get tired about giving out about all that is wrong with society!

There are two types of madness - one gets you sectioned, the other gets you friends.

The true value of anything is what we give up for it.

There is no precise means to live the good life, there is only a spectrum.

Every government fails. That is why they are called the government.

You are what you do, not what you say you will do.

Everyone has the facts that suit their perspective.

"My god, what have I done!" Is arguably the one thing you don't want to be saying in life.

We don't even understand ourselves, let lone the billions of lost souls out there.

The worst punishment for the criminal with a conscience is to let him live.

We all contribute to how dreadful the world is.

The blueprint for imperfection is perfect.

You can have the perfect plan and still lose. But not everything is a lesson, sometimes its just life.

Are you going to spend your whole life giving out about "the elites!" Or will you say, this is the way the dice fell and try to do your best.

The surest way to be positively popular is to be unsuccessful.

It is very hard to excel at something when you are busy all the time.

In the bureaucracy reform is an impossibility.

You have to forgive society. Or else you will be bitter.

You cannot make everyone happy. But when both sides of the political divide turn on you, you have royally messed up.

The intellectuals tend to side with the poor because the rich are not stupid enough to give them all their money.

You cannot buy back your integrity once you have parted with it.

The best grifters are the ones who convince you they aren't one.

When you state things the mob doesn't agree with, then comes the expulsion from the group.

To make the ignorant think for once, instead of either adoring or hating, is most difficult, if not impossible.

When one is possessed by ideology, things tend to be perceived as binary, when in reality they are a spectrum.

The most idiotic people alive expect society to be perfect. They are also the cruellest if given a carte blanche.

There is more than one executioner in society and quite often they hate each other.

No man ever gets bored with the propaganda he agrees with.

Being really smart is being on neither side and profiting off the war between them.

What you want to aim for in life is to be humble enough to admit you are an idiot.

Have you ever noticed that no matter what the ultra famous person says, he is always criticized by someone. That is not because he is flawed, but the nature of the mob. To put it mildly, were you in his or her position, you would also be subjected to the same criticism, despite what you think.

The man that doesn't have the solutions doesn't go viral.

What you want to be is the rich man no one even knows about.

Most are too busy to critically think. So they listen to a grifter and then call what he says the truth.

When are you going to give up the idealism of the system built in your perspective and just accept it for what it is?

Everyone from god to a plumber could tell you the worst case scenario that gives them sleepless nights, usually related to their own discipline, but more than likely wont happen, as history has shown.

If you express your opinion, then you must choose sides. So if you dont want to choose sides, then you know what must be done.

It is not more honourable when the whole mob does it as opposed to the individual.

There are a billion things that go wrong about the world everyday. That is however the nature of society.

The two worst letters in the alphabet are N and V, because when you put them together you get envy.

Not everyone is a saint, but everyone is a sinner.

No one doubts their genius. But they do their cruelty.

To understand one you must understand their ambitions.

Society is always in a state of crisis - that is where its good comes from.

Where it gets difficult for one is when there are two or more executioners in society, and they must choose between them.

We condemn the avariciousness of the billionaire hedge fund bankers, not aware that we would be as greedy as them were we in an identical position.

If you are not optimistic, you do not know how to live.

Everyone has a great story to tell - their life.

We are all grifters. The difference between us is whether we are convincing ones.

There is great value in an ordinary life.

There are no simple solutions to society's ills.

We are all victims of our own personality.

Everyone expects the world in their perspective. There is a term for this - a police state.

It is from people wishing to make money that you can take money.

Bad logic to begin with leads only to bad outcomes.

The best advice I can give one, is that it is up to you to figure things out.

It is most difficult to convince one they are not a genius, as though they are the delusional on an asylum.

You have a negative label for everyone that doesn't agree with you or align with your values. This label doesn't make you right though.

Society breaks, then fixes itself, then breaks again, and this cycle is perpetual.

You should never interrupt the masses while they are being stupid. Just let them be and try to profit off it.

When there is a dopamine rush on the line, you tend to forgive "the capitalist pig" in question.

Most are willing to fight to the death to prove that they are the normal ones.

One tends to believe whatever madness doesn't get them sectioned.

The intellectual that tells you all that is right with the world, lives in poverty.

Men must be heavily stigmatized, because if they are not, other men don't get married.

When man tries to play god, the streets tend to be emptied.

No one gets to win in society - they just get to lose less than others.

An opinion on the matter is what you share with Joseph Stalin. If god is what he says he is, then he wont have one.

Society is flawed, that is the rule. Your dreams are the exception.

One could live in heaven and still be unsatisfied and want a better heaven.

It is much easier to be bad in a good society than the reverse.

The executioner is as guilty as those whose head will roll. But power is the one who holds the axe.

A relationship requires discipline, something the dreamers lack.

The scariest thing about war is how impersonally bureaucratic it is.

If you are reckless, life will humble you and be quick at it too.

There is a fortune to be made by telling people how the imperfect would can be made perfect. But it is a lie and you know it is.

We all daydream about revolution, but quite often the revolution does not dream of you. We must therefore be careful what we wish for.

You become who you listen to, therefore you must choose them wisely.

We side with the executioners, especially if we are good friends with them.

One should be most careful not to dismiss scenarios just because they counter your idealism.

Hell is a place where all your dreams come true.

Society is very lucky that most of it is incredibly stupid.

Those the mob hates can do no right and those they love can do no wrong. That is the definition of being ideologically possessed.

Society may be ravaged, but the world always moves on.

It is impossible for the possessed to even entertain the thought that perhaps they are not right.

It is sort of a sociological cat in the box experiment - two people debating something are both right and wrong at the same time, for all they have is perspective. This is why I gave up arguing with others.

Unfortunately, if you could give everyone what they wanted, we all would be imprisoned.

To be ungrateful is akin to being cruel - it is a choice.

In order to assuage one side, you must risk offending the other side. And that is what has become of the political divide.

One should in the democratic culture vote for economic principles above all else.

People tend to prioritize pain before anything else. You could treat one royally, but should they suffer in some way, they will quickly forget all the good you did for them.

Economics is something we will never stop talking about.

Outrage prevents others from committing the crime, but not all.

Crime in society is the rule, not the exception.

The surest way to gain a following is to be critical of the successful.

To fix oneself requires self-sacrifice, something one is unable to hedge.

Most people don't make the difficult decisions in life until they are out of options.

A man will forgive a woman if she is attractive. A woman will do the same for a wealthy man.

To catch ones attention, tell them the world is ending. To make lots of money, tell them this every day.

Everyone has their time, but not everyone takes it.

Every dictator has enemies that have not even been born yet.

No politician attains power through promising normality.

There are billions more people taking sides than there are ones willing to accept that society is flawed.

You have your opinion and then those that agree with you are deemed right, whilst those that contradict your views are deemed wrong. There is an expression for this - infantile narcissism. Those that suffer this assume, that if the world was just built in their image, it would be a utopia. How delusional could they be!

Man is born thinking he is right. The worst of us never grow out of this.

Revolution is a book written in blood.

War is always a contest as to who can endure suffering the most.

Trade is either a countries glory or its disease.

The mentality of the fool is one of nonstop, eternal, perpetual outrage. What about all that is right about the world.

You have to get tired of being right all the time. That is the way to mature.

The two guarantees of war are that the poor will die and the rich will get richer.

Children raised right in poverty do much better at the game we call life than those raised wrong in affluence.

Solving problems, that is where value is created.

It is not just you that believes there is this clandestine conspiracy against you. Billions do and they are not all right about it.

It is the dollar that decides what we think. Regardless of whether you are a shop manager or a president of a country.

There are no universally adored choices. A choice for someone, is a choice against someone else.

It is poverty and the incentive to get out of it that produces the genius we see around us.

The means to control a republic is to brainwash its citizens so much that they don't know what freedom is, to such an extent that they will probably be disappointed should they get it.

It is difficult to convince the possessed that they are wrong, but impossible to convince them that they are neither right nor wrong.

Society is never as simple as "its that simple."

The womb is the only place where man makes no mistakes.

Everyone has an opinion on the task at hand, because that is how we make money.

Authentic love is when you find someone you are willing to suffer for.

Being broke has a high cost.

Making things better matters only for whom.

What the intellectuals always say when they get it wrong is "I gave advice, not orders."

We grow up full of idealism only for life to hit us and hard.

One would rather persist in delusion than admit they are delusional.

Man spends his life searching for something no man ever finds - his freedom.

The path is never easy in life - if it is, its not the path.

A person is what you are willing to forgive in them. But somethings are unforgiveable.

Opinion is a million year blessing, but so many misuse it.

We live in a society where everyone thinks they are right.

Our knowledge is limited by limitations of those who wrote it.

We are all liars, the difference between us is whether we are good ones.

Life in the West isn't fair, but it is stable and stability has enormous value.

It is more of a question of how cruel in life you wont be as opposed to how good you feel you are.

The vocal outraged mob is a terrible group to be part of.

If you have an answer for everything, you are nothing.

In order to live life you must put it on the line every once and a while.

Society is sometimes in your favour, often not though, but it is never quite where you want it to precisely be.

You go to the bookshop - one book is about all that is good in your life, the other about all that's wrong with it. Which one you pick up says so much about you.

King or murderer, everyone wants to be understood.

To take to the streets, united in protest, there is no nice way to say how stupid you are to do this.

To the mob, when you succeed you are genius, but when you fail, they know better than you.

One is a prisoner to their attributes.

Without appreciation for life you will lack happiness.

Just because everyone at the table thinks they are correct, doesn't make them so.

When you rewrite the rules, the first response to it is always laughter.

Too much success defeats its purpose.

The best thing you can do with your opinion is not share it.

History has a habit of almost changing.

The populace only has two emotions - adoration or outrage. When everyone is somewhere in-between.

Time is an unjust creditor.

One thing is certain about the future is that it is impossible to predict.

If you have this system figured out, you profit off the mob on the streets.

The majorities outrage with the minorities, is cliched stupidity, and nothing more.

You are not your regrets, but what you learn from them.

Society is such that there is right and wrong and a whole of insanity in-between them.

Everyone is an expert when it comes to what is wrong with the world.

Just because someone has a different viewpoint to you, doesn't make them wrong and you right.

The more right one believes themselves to be, the further they prevent themselves from maturing.

Who is the smart ones - the owners of some huge sports team that make millions or the fans chasing a dopamine rush!

Any movement that says it can produce a utopia, cannot do this without the most brutal violence conceivable.

It is the wise that notice that every day there is a different problem in society - and that you don't get a society without them.

Everyone has mistakes to their name, even you, but you are not dirt famous.

You should pay attention to your haters for it is they that point out your flaws.

You have not matured until your regrets take the place of your dreams.

Those you idolize have done some questionable things and those you resent deserve to be forgiven to an extent.

Have you ever noticed you find something to give out about in society every day! Perhaps it might also dawn on you that society is not meant to be perfect.

Wisdom is the humility to concede you may not actually know everything.

Can you live with your regrets, that is the question.

Don't let the darkness of life consume you - be the change you want in the world.

The worst thing you can do is listen to someone else to learn something that should be discovered by yourself.

The stupid tend to do whatever the propaganda tells them.

Your regrets say more about you than anything else.

There is no polite way to tell someone their expectations for life are unrealistic.

The melancholic believes they suffer the worst luck possible, when others also do, they just deal with it better.

Since the dawn of modern civilization, the intellectuals have been saying the world will end, and it hasn't. Who will catch your attention - the person who says life is boring or the person that says it is ending!

What is healthy in society is when two opposites debate each other as to who is right. What is unhealthy is when they both agree that one of them is right.

No ones life is perfect. Everyone's life has burdens. But we must move forward in spite of them.

There is no four step guide to a better life. There isn't even a four million step guide to one.

If you ever notice, all these intellectuals say the world is ending in a specific way, which reality contradicts.

Anyone who promises utopia isn't to be trusted.

The neighbours might not meet your standards, but you probably don't meet theirs either.

It is not what you vote for, but what you are willing to put up with that matters.

You have to begin to accept that you are nowhere near as smart as you believe yourself to be.

What is most difficult for one to discover, is how ignorant they actually are.

What is most dangerous for one isn't their enemies, but when their allies start making exit plans.

What hurts the most is not the self-betrayal, but that we did it for nothing.

A man exists that has made no mistakes and he is yet to be born.

The average college educated individual would have to live two lives to fully appreciate what they have - the first one to suffer so badly, so as to learn how to be grateful in the second one.

Every child deserves a good parent. But not every parent deserves a child.

Very few people recover from a traumatic childhood.

The best judge of one is how their children turn out.

The future rarely turns out as even the gods predicted.

If you are gullible enough to idolize, you get the tyrants you deserve.

Most wars are fought over thought.

For the crime of idealism, we are all guilty.

To be part of neither political side is a very lonely crusade.

No one is as cruel as those that expect a beautiful world.

It is so condescending for the well off to criticise those less fortunate than them in life.

The outrage against the successful is a terrible confession of your character. The perpetually outraged is a terrible group to be part of. As if were you in the position of extreme power and wealth, everyone would adore you. No, you would be as hated as the billionaires are hated now.

It takes so much wisdom to accept that society is not perfect. However for most, this escapes their intellect.

There is no flourishing without sacrifice, in a company and in a marriage.

What is wrong with the world is like a Hitchcockian thriller. What is right about the same world is a boring romance novel.

You don't get the government you want. You don't even get the version of you that you want. You have to compromise on both.

To be part of the cult means you become the cult. This makes your thought process predictable, it is whatever doesn't get you expelled from the said group, be it liberal or conservative. The liberals say they are correct with whatever is put to them, as do the conservatives, when both are neither right nor wrong - all they have is perspective. But what they both are is brainwashed - but they deny this too when put to them.

If you get your delusions validated, it is impossible then to know you are delusional - this is what has become of the political factions.

The most brutal horrors stem from punishing society into a utopia.

The only thing to understand about the idiot mob is it is never enough for them. They are always outraged over something. Even if you could implement utopia on Monday, by Tuesday they would be back to giving out.

We are all victims of insanely good luck - had world war two not happened, the course of history would have been completely different and your father would never have met your mother. Or had your grandfather spent 30 extra seconds talking to a neighbour 80 years ago, it would have set off a chain of infinite events that you would never have been born as you.

How immature do you have to be to label everyone with a counter opinion to yours as vile? Respectfully and I am not trying to sound pretentious, but if this is your mentality, you have a lot of maturing to do.

Society is diverse and always in a perpetual state of getting better.

There is no polite way to tell someone they are an ideologically possessed idiot. Such a person is not smart enough to realize they are stupid.

When you have bills to pay, you tend to adhere to the party line down to the nuts and bolts.

To demean the successful minorities is the most clichéd outrage there is, as though were you in their position, you would be universally adored.

You are blessed with intelligence and you waste it all on trying to convince others that you are right and they are wrong.

It takes great wisdom, wisdom that is beyond most, to recognize that every day they find twenty things to complain about. What about all that is right about the world!

The healthy society is diverse. The unhealthy one is formulated in ones specific vision.

One is brainwashed, but because 95% of the population mimics them, they assume they are not.

What we all share in common is we all want a better life.

A good childhood is priceless. The shame is for those that had one and want better.

If you are going down the route of negatively labelling anyone who doesn't meet your standards, then the whole world would be subject to such labelling. If you could send off those that don't match the standards, the streets would be empty.

People tend to remember their emotional response to an experience rather than its specific details. For instance, while you might recall a YouTube video from two months ago as engaging and high-quality, but the actual subject matter often fades from memory.

Every age is the darkest age of humanity, and yet life goes on.

America is healthy in that the two political factions don't let each other become extreme. Now both of them assume that if only America was all democrat or all republican, then there would be a utopia, depending on which side you are on, what would actually transpire is you get a police state like Iran or Russia.

Our young are a victim of their youth.

Your opinion is speculation not fact.

Nothing is ever as simple as "plain and simple."

The easiest way to make money is to scream that the world is ending.

You cannot mature without being burdened with regrets - the two are synonymous with each other.

Life is tough. If it isn't you are still a child from a good background.

Adversity is the great teacher.

It takes so much critical thought to be able to accept you are not right. And most are too busy to ever acquire such wisdom.

Living is precisely what you do as you wait to live.

Your heroes have their flaws and those you resent are capable of good.

The themes of what you say matter not, but how you convey them. That is what draws people in.

Life is very good at one thing - going on.

It is the brutal that are incapable of forgiveness.

Everyone has their time, their moment. But not everyone takes it.

The world is flawed. If you are mature you accept this and move on. If you lack maturity you yearn for it to be perfect.

A healthy society is one in which the six o clock news is on every day.

If you are really smart, you profit off the discontent, not partake in it.

A parents children are the summation of their hopes and fears.

Our mistake is to assume the good times will last forever.

What is most frightening is that the cruellest people in history were boring normal ones before their infamy.

We live in a society where no one is happy for you until you are as miserable as they are.

It is when a wife loses her voice, that is when the husband is in trouble.

Society is busy changing, not ending.

Everyone makes errors, but a good strategist tries to avoid making pivotal ones.

Every revolution goes through two stages - first they are united against the common enemy, then secondly they are united against each other.

The dictatorship slowly alters the rules to such an extent that one eventually consents to injustice.

If you are going to have faith, have faith in yourself.

The purpose of life should be to grow.

Those that say sex is only sex are the ones most likely to get in trouble because of it.

The most frightening place to be is the place you were ten years ago.

People will side with the mob that gets them in the least amount of trouble, regardless of whether they approve of its policy or not.

You cannot sweep the dust under the rug without getting the brush dirty.

The difference between what is right about our life and what is wrong about, is everyone could write a book on the latter.

Most are too busy deciding what to eat for dinner, to be cognizant of how it will all end.

It is quite ironic that the minorities have to be brutal to get equality. Equality is never given but earned.

No one is born wise, they become it.

The trick is not to grow old with someone, but find someone who views you at 90 years old as they did when they first saw you.

The only time to have an opinion is when you are being purposely paid for it. If not, then you are just wasting it.

It is better to have money than be right, is the thinking that gets many in trouble.

The best mistakes to make are the ones whose lessons are taught before you have made them.

The best thing you can do with chaos is apply logic to it.

You are living in an environment where if you don't have the answer, someone else will.

Every generation shares the same fear - that the world is ending.

Is one born ignorant or made it?

If you got rid of all the rich in society, it would still function. But if you got rid of all the idiots, the same society would collapse.

Ignorance is a group phenomenon.

You cannot teach one out of stupidity.

If you pay no price for getting it wrong, you have a tendency to say irrational things.

When society needs a scapegoat, it is the successful that are targeted.

We become the lies we tell ourselves.

We literally dance in the rain when life goes our way, but never own up when we are at fault.

It is a very small jump, smaller than one would like to admit, from being a decent citizen to the next Heinrich Himmler.

Life is tragic - one minute you have it and then you don't.

One must try to outlive their own self that worries about what others think of them.

You may be rich because you have money, but we are all broke with respect to time.

There is a first and tragically a last time for everything.

No amount of money ever feels like enough.

The more you have in life, the more you stand to lose. That is why success does not suppress anxiety.

Appreciation is fleeting but wanting is perpetual.

The most dangerous individual is one who has lost everything.

People only value honesty when it is dishonest in their favour.

One cannot feed their family without impressing the community.

Every fall is a humble reminder to us all.

Does one need to be understood or do they just need peace?

We spend today expecting tomorrow to be perfect and it never is.

We live in an age where comfort has replaced depth.

Hunger is the true philosophy, gratitude cannot be eaten.

If the philosophy is to hate the other side I would not follow it.

It is the nature of language to not have truth, to not have a winner, and one is at the mercy of it.

If you think you are perfect, how then can you grow.

Nothing captures the attention of the vulnerable like being told exactly what is wrong with the world and what precisely are its solutions.

The grifter always has answers for whatever is put to him. That is difference between him and the wise.

Half the people you meet don't care what was done to you and the other half are glad it did.

The present is our only reality and the best one at that.

It is easy to be cruel and difficult to be good.

People don't care about the world changing unless it specifically effects them.

We inhabit a society where people must choose money over anything else, if the choice is forced upon them.

Society has the problems it needs.

The fear of losing power is its punishment for gaining it.

The child has no insight into the condition of their life - if they are abused, that is normal for them - if they grow up in wealth they are cursed with taking it all for granted.

Dreams cannot be a substitute for reality.

The fool has an answer for everything put to him.

On the subject of money, its bad is obvious, all the good not as much.

To mature is to not have all the answers for what life asks of us.

Society does not end despite what is prophesized - it either succeeds or it changes.

Hope is a terrible strategy.

Life is such that you can do everything by the book and still lose out.

Which YouTube video catches your attention more - the one that says the world is ending or the one that tells you everything good about the world? This is why the intellectuals tend to be fear-mongers, for there is more money to be made from it.

The intellectuals have the solutions for problems that fundamentally don't have solutions. You could be missing your two legs and an intellectual would suggest a method to regrow them.

Losing friends is often the best teacher one has.

Life just repeats itself for those too busy to notice.

The "saint" has no idea just how cruel they can be.

The two most effective ways to gain a cult following is to one, tell people they are persecuted, and two, by precisely who.

There is no perfect in society, only less worse.

When it comes to the economy, there is plenty of wrong, but no right.

The two tragic adults are A) the ones that were abused as children and B) those who had excellent childhoods who take it all for granted.

Society is built on a comfortable despair, one in which we can live with.

There are three people in every relationship - you, me and we.

Get creative often means commit crime.

The man that tells you what is right with the world doesn't make near as much money as the man that tells you the opposite.

What money buys you is options.

Where the deviant makes the rules, no justice can be sought.

It is most easy for the multimillionaires to make decisions for which others starve.

You should only opine on politics when you are paid to.

Scoring brownie points, trying to be a Smart Alec by winning some pathetic debate, is a very poor reflection of you.

Purpose is to respond to what life asks of us.

An empty life is as treacherous as a hard one.

A healthy society is diverse. You can therefore speculate as to what an unhealthy one is.

A man is what no one knows about him.

The average intellectual knows the secret to life and has about ten of them!

There are hundreds of millions of people across the globe that would kill to have the past and present that you have.

When the world changes, you must change your mindset too.

Everyone is born with two opposing forces within them - confidence and anxiety. How they are raised determines which one prevails.

Life is a carpet, just not necessarily a red one.

What is most difficult for one to accept is when a relationship has run its course.

If everyone reported anyone who didn't fit their moral criteria, the streets would be empty.

Every day nightmare things could happen, most of which don't.

Maturity is an alien concept to those that have none of it.

The most barbaric acts are committed by people who consider themselves "the good guys."

Do things that you know in hindsight you would say you would do it again.

Love is like playing at a high stakes table.

The goal of any moral intellectual is to be misunderstood.

It is not enough to be smart, you have to be smart strategically.

If you are smart, you chase validation through achievement.

People will follow the confident fool over the humble genius.

Most people resent a maturity that they lack.

It doesn't matter if you are the most intelligent in the room or its idiot - both of you are on anti-depressants.

It is our fate to be forgotten, no matter what you achieve.

The best advice I can give is that there is no universal advice - what works for one is poison to another, such is the diversity of society.

It takes a lifetime for one to recognize just how fortunate they were in life.

Everyone's life is uncertain and unpredictable and no one else's fault.

There exists an endless struggle in society - between those that have and those that have not.

To run towards your future at the same speed as you run towards your past, gets you nowhere.

To pursue one is to control them.

Go one way and you get chaos. Go another way and you get a perverse chaos. Its merely a question of what chaos you are willing to tolerate in life.

If you are really busy in life, you will not be smart, despite what you convince yourself. If you are really busy, such as working a job and looking after your family in the evening, you will not be able to critically think and instead will just adopt some philosophy that you read in a book or saw on social media.

To love one is different than to want them.

Ones childhood is either gift or a burden.

What the intellectual excels at is taking what represents a section of society and saying it is indicative of the whole of society.

There are no facts only interpretations, despite what the intellectuals try to claim. Society is always a question of what flaws you are willing to bear.

It is easier to love than to be loved.

What money enables you to do is to not have to worry about what the neighbours think of you.

The best advice I can give after all I have written is try not to throw your life away for nothing.

The sole purpose of indoctrination is to limit ones imagination.

Man has been making bets since the dawn of modern civilization and bad ones too.

The most creative class are the poor class.

To the youth of day, social media is their religion.

The free in the west seldom acknowledge how good they have it.

Beauty fades, but stupidity is forever.

The ambitious either live the life of kings or die all alone.

When more than one person is in charge, that means no one is in charge.

It is when you are at your peak that it is most dangerous.

Fame is the solution to our problems in theory and the beginning of them in execution.

You cannot make it to the top if you don't know what it is.

Everyone's childhood contains some form of tragedy - what separates us is whether we overcome it.

The most intelligent powerful men are the ones you never hear about, who keep quiet and stay unassuming.

No one is the only one of anything.

Most of the wicked don't consider themselves as such.

The trick in this system isn't to be good but popular.

Do you ruminate on what has gone wrong in your life or how worse it could be?

One of the keys to success is setting the bar low.

You have been sold a lie about what you deserve in life.

We question others delusions, but never our own.

If we are starving, whatever puts food on the table seems like a gift from the gods.

It is easy to have integrity when times are good. To uphold this when times are harsh is the true measure.

People want to be told they are victims and of who or what.

If you treat a relationship from the vantage point of a dopamine rush, then you can understand why after the marriage cannot match before it.

One never listens to history if there is a profit to made by ignoring it.

You either argue about money or you make it.

The most heinous crime in the affluent societies is stealing from the rich.

To be understood by your peers, is to be misunderstood by yourself.

You are living in a system whereby you don't get to create great memories without money.

There is no victory between the political factions. It is constant warfare.

Which is more advantageous - you because of the world or you against it?

You are who you choose not to become.

If no one dislikes you, you are living a very safe existence.

You are very lucky if you get to grow up without becoming bitter.

Everyone is good at something. What makes enemies of one is when you are better than them.

Maturity has no deadline.

In the struggle to succeed, one only sees the success, not the struggle.

Just because they contradict your beliefs, doesn't make them wrong.

A difficult family life when young is not necessarily a failure on the part of the family.

It is easier to declare oneself a victim that accept something troubling about oneself.

In order to critically think beyond your cult, you must risk being shunned by it.

To die is easy. To live not as much.

If you don't want to be contradicted, then don't share your opinion.

Every intellectual likes to position themselves as smarter than both their detractors and their allies.

Part of growth is to figure life out yourself, rather than just listening to someone else.

Society is actually falling together as it is falling apart.

Every intellectual likes to position themselves as the saviour to societies ills.

Everything is perspective and not truth. Those you disagree with are not wrong - those you idolize are not correct.

Those you elect, just as those you are friends with, will not match your moral ideals 100%, so it is always a question of what defects or flaws you are willing to accept in them. Unless you want to be all alone in life.

It is nearly always a case of choosing between two leaders that are less worse than each other than better.

To the fool, things are black and white. To the mature, things are infinite shades of grey.

If you don't experience real fear from time to time, your mind then creates it.

Most people don't get rich because they want to get rich quickly.

Most ask "how will I find the right person?" It never dawns on them that they must also give in return.

It is more important to enjoy the struggle in life than what you struggle for.

A woman demands in a man that were she to fall, he will catch her.

Life does not make sense from a rational point of view. We chase things that cause anxiety and unhappiness. But if you look at it from a gamblers perspective, then it all comes together - we are chasing a dopamine rush, be it a narcotic, a relationship, a sports team or validation for our ideals.

You are going to have regrets either way, and perhaps even if you did not have them, that would be the most hurtful regret in on itself.

Every challenge has its opportunity.

What is certain in life is that it wont go to plan. What matters then is how you improvise.

You cannot critically think if you are unwilling to.

There is one great measure of someone's maturity - can they forgive. If they cannot, they are no better than the Soviet Secret Police.

Those that align themselves with the executioners of the given age, are not his loyal supporters, but his victims.

For some crimes you don't live long enough to be forgiven.

It is such a terrible culture to live in, one where everyone must be perfect.

Most businesses don't have a sales problem but a margins problem.

What looks like wealth is often a painful overhead.

Your wealth is the money you don't spend when no one is looking.

The idiot of society never sees the bad in the saint nor the good in the sinner.

The violent can be classified as those that cannot forgive - that is why women would be as cruel as the male dictators they despise.

By all accounts forgive one. Just don't expect the mob to.

One is their convictions - no less.

Our life is what we do when we are not dreaming.

The river may be polluted, but it drags everyone with it.

All the money in the world is next to useless if the homeless man on the streets is happier than you.

The worst group to be part of is one you cannot leave.

The vast vast majority of people lack imagination. Therefore they must settle for learning.

Just as a society is flawed so too are its individuals.

The rich are so poor that all they have is money.

A leader should be a reflection of his society and not the other way around.

Humbleness does not catch ones attention - certainty does. The people want to be told precisely what is wrong with their society and also the accurate solutions to make it perfect - which do not exist. They don't want to be told that society is flawed, diverse and lacking solutions. The liberals want to be told it’s the conservatives fault and vice versa. Then they want to be told that if we just purged all the conservatives (and vice versa), utopia would be ushered in, which is false - you just get different problems. But as I suggest, humbleness doesn't sell many books.

The best judge of a system is how many Starbucks there are in that said country.

To the bitter, whoever is doing well in life, is doing at the expense of the said embittered.

Where there is a power vacuum, there is always a power struggle.

One either has an attitude of what they have in life or what they lack. The two are polar opposites.

To be hired one must abide by the 80/20 rule - it is 20% your CV and 80% who you are.

There is no adjective in the English language that accurately describes how brutal those who expect utopia in life are. They are the most perverse and cruel people in existence. In the 20th century alone, the utopians murdered hundreds of millions of people.

One is a utopian first and then they adopt the fascist or Marxist doctrine as an attempt to induce utopia in a culture.

When dying, your appetite goes - when depressed, your appetite to live goes.

Those who are not afraid of being condemned, tend to be.

We always think when dreaming about power, how good we would be, never how brutal we would be.

Any revolution goes through three stages - it is firstly bizarre, then insane, then normal.

There is no such thing as perfection in society - one is either better or worse than someone else, be it a team or a country.

The revolution you want is never the revolution you get. You will have to compromise.

You don't make millions by telling people the truth, but by telling them what they want to hear.

Mistakes are a given in life, not because of you, but because things are unpredictable.

Can I give you some advice: the trick isn't to be perfect, the trick is simply to be better than those you are competing against.

Everyone figures it out eventually, either when they are middle aged and average, or when they are hours from death.

What modern existence has boiled down to is what we are going to spend our money on this week. This is what gratifies us.

The most dangerous leaders are the ones that focus on short term gains over long term consequences.

What all teens share in common is that they fully believe they are the exception and not the rule.

To tell people what to think, you show them who to hate.

All these intellectuals use hyperbolic, exaggerated, life or death language, because that captures ones attention.

Science-fiction turning to science-fact is either a great thing or the end of humanity.

The only way to not be despised is to not be adored in the first place. But most cannot offer up the latter.

Life is not black and white, it is infinite shades of grey. To the man, women have it better in society. To the woman, men have it better in society. The reality is that both men and women have it better and worse over each other in different ways. But the average intellectual doesn't make money if this is their policy.

You are responsible for your philosophy. Whether others agree with it or not is their problem.

If you started judging your heroes by how morally correct they are, you would have none.

When two billionaires are battling it out, the mob is glued to their screens. But do you think the opposite is true!

A fool is a fool. To debate with him makes two of you.

The intellectual seldom shares advice for benevolent reasons.

In most cases, including the democratic West, the executioners choose their victims and not the other way around.

Cancel Culture has become the executioner of the "free" West.

It is the guilty that are the least likely to forgive - to assuage the shame of their own past, they condemn in the present.

Opinion makes one stupid, but at the same time, in some states you are forbidden from having one.

We don't know what we want from life, so we either mimic others or do what we are told.

Your life is what you make of it - there is nothing more frightening than being responsible for it.

What is most difficult for the modern day man to accept is just how much of cliché he is.

There is word for when things don't go as planned - life.

Parents sacrifice so much for their children and the best they get back in return is resentment.

Everyone markets themselves as better than everyone else, when society demonstrates that we are all the same.

Inflation is like bodyfat - a little bit of it is good for you.

The unintelligent are dumb because they don't read - the intelligent, because they do.

A species is limited by its language.

Authentic love is when both people are unwilling to betray each other.

If you are smart you align yourself with the values and not the person.

We are always learning and always will be - the college departments will never go out of business.

We live in a world where we are constantly becoming something else.

The debate never ends, it just metamorphizes.

Look at what we cannot talk about - that is the truth.

Most of us, individuals and companies alike, only care about money, and therefore will "take out" anyone who damages this money laundering.

It doesn't make sense that grown men can follow sports teams - intelligent grown men that is. However it does make sense if you see that they are chasing the "gambling high" from their team winning - then you can understand it.

Show me a perfect person and I will show you a liar.

One would rather be called vile, than starve to death. That is what determines people.

Most have their own ideal of perfection. This is the dictator mentality.

The lesser evil is always the decision that doesn't get you thrown out onto the streets made homeless.

Life has predictable challenges but also predictable opportunities.

When your back is against the wall, that is when you figure it out.

Some wake up in the morning and say what have I done. Others wake up and say what now.

One observes their struggle and says it destroyed them. Another experiences the same struggle and says it gave them strength.

Your past is dead and your future is your salvation.

If you are obsessed with work, don't have too many children, as they will resent you for it.

Every new law has its unintended consequences.

Life is but a chance to see something beyond your cage.

Gratification tends to be a very ungrateful endeavour. The high yesterday means nothing - it is all about right now. Gratification is a temporary fix for a permanent hunger.

Don't worry if people are outraged by you, for that only means they can adore you should the conditions change.

Money can be earned, lost and earned again. Time cannot.

No one gets the leaders the want but the charlatans they deserve.

When life is good, one thanks themselves. When life is not as good, they blame the institutions.

During times of crisis it is men that must serve the hope.

To live is to learn.

Marx's philosophy was built not of the equality of the working class, but of he fall of the bourgeoise.

The end, everyone's, will be so painful you are better off not knowing what it will be.

In order to appreciate life, we would have to be born old and die young.

Hyperbole sells. The truth on the other hand is boring.

It is far easier in life to be sanctimonious than forgiving.

There is no utopia without its gestapo.

If you are too nice, lacking a bit of cruelty, you will be anxious in life.

An intellectual is a scammer we don't believe himself to be one.

It is easier to disappear than become someone else.

What is most pertinent to understand about society is that it does not forgive.

You can give out about life, but giving out is not a strategy.

History has always warned against easy victories.

Those that don't worry about money, worry about what others think of them.

A relationship is the only way we can have sex and not be stigmatized for it.

So many fail in life because they get married, thus denying themselves the time to pursue other activities.

What Stalin teaches us is that if we wish to maintain power, we have to have dirt on people.

Everyone is hired for ideas and sacked for results.

The key to happiness in life is many times more complicated than a one-minute-three-step advice program.

Success is a patient process.

Ones motivation is seldom to make the world better.

Those that stand for justice can never be killed.

If you want to live a long life, make your conviction your drug of choice.

Societies problems must always be part of the discourse, but what is more important is for humans to talk to each other.

It is one thing to earn a lot of money. It is another thing to be good with it.

The average idiot were he in charge, would always individualize the success, but collectivise the failure.

You have to find what works for you in life and you have to do it yourself. And it takes ten years.

At best you get to live a good life, not a comfortable one.

Hyperbole catches attention. Reality not as much. That is why all these intellectuals say the world will end sometime in the near future.

Let the dice fall as they may and then go from there. Have no regrets and no self-pity.

Marx was nothing more than a cult leader, prophesizing the utopia, as they all do.

If you believe yourself to be right, you wont budge an inch on it, you will meet failure after failure in life. If you want to live a happy existence, you must be willing to not get your way all the time.

It is easy to live the good life on someone else's money.

To any idiot the solutions to the problem in question are simple.

You are not a sports fan - you are a gambling degenerate addicted to your team winning.

A good leader tries not to only think of himself.

Politicians come and go. The board-rooms do not.

You are governed by entities you cannot even imagine.

Most social anxieties can be traced back to analysts.

If you know the reward, then you know the outcome.

History only repeats itself because the frameworks of society do.

Socialism nearly always turns to oppression just to survive.

If you speak well, you don't have to be any good.

The most cruel people in society are the ones that cannot forgive.

Chaos isn't the goal of any revolutionary, but the cover.

The impatient mob gets the tyrants they deserve.

Be extremely grateful if you are a decent person, for you could have been otherwise.

We are always living in a future that is ultimately bleak. At 25 we want advice on how to be happy when we 55 and so on.

Every utopia has its own form of tragedy.

There are two types of crime - crimes and crimes that are not forgiven.

Every revelation is either the end of your life or its beginning.

By making life easier and easier each year, you eventually make it difficult.

Society is always tearing itself apart and perhaps it is meant to.

Uncertainty in life is more certain than happiness. Prepare for it.

Everyone sees society as they are, and because of this they are sure that if everyone was just like them, the world would be perfect.

The leaders come and go, but the board-rooms stay intact.

If everyone gets their way, no one does.

Those in power want all the authority but none of the accountability.

If you are mature, you have a plan for yourself. If you lack maturity, you have a plan for society.

There is an infinity of things to blame in a culture, not as much to applaud, which says so much about the nature of man.

The unknown live good lives, but history quickly forgets them.

One is most dangerous when they have lost everything, for they then have nothing to lose.

If you express your opinion, then you must accept that it may be contradicted.

The rulers you want aren't always the rulers you get and vice versa.

The busy don't see how clichéd existence is. That's one of the benefits of being busy.

Depression is the inability to have something to look forward to.

If the world was perfect we would all become drug addicts.

You can punish the act but not prevent it.

You are a grifter, I am a grifter, we are all grifters trying to make a living.

If you are not willing to look down, you run the risk of throwing it all away for nothing.

You want to have a relation with one but not be dependent on them.

Id worry more about he or she that doesn't have a black mark to their name, than the one who does.

We are chasing these dopamine rushes. Work provides one, as does our sports team winning, as does winning some debate in the discourse. But so too do the narcotics.

Those that don't look low enough tend to have high falls.

We ask two things of society without realizing it - to be known and to be accepted for who we are.

Human societies are such that you cannot exist without making enemies along the way.

The worst falls are the ones you never see coming.

Is the economy doing well? It always depends on who you ask.

If you are really smart, they pay you for your opinion. You do not offer it for free.

If you don't fight for the future, there will be none.

The end of any revolution is actually its beginning.

To understand the behaviour you either have to understand the incentive or the threat.

There is no end to the pain in society. But no end to the overcoming of it too.

If one executioner says he will kill you now, and a second one says he will kill you tomorrow, we both know who you will choose.

The commoner has convinced themselves that if you just imprisoned all the criminals, the resultant society would be perfect.

You are either busy loving or busy working, but it is difficult to do both.

Growth requires a specific amount of challenge - not too much and not too little.

What freedom truly means for one is the freedom to be hated.

What goes viral in society is the deviant. The good stuff about society is casually ignored.

We are all troubled. Its more of question of how much compared to everyone else.

Everyone turns into an expert when contradicted.

Every miracle has its price tag.

Behind every battlefield lies the balance-sheet.

For every room you ever enter, you should know where the fire escape is.

To be successful is to be hated.

Very few in society are willing to accept that perhaps they may just not be right.

What is worse than being unable to escape your past is to be unable to escape the future too.

We live fast because we think we have enough time.

Success is dangerous because it is addictive - you always want more.

There is a difference between accumulation and experiencing.

Our gravest mistake is that we think we have time. The worst thing you can say in life is "Later."

When are you going to give up on being bitter and just accept the flawed world for what it is!

Once you are in society you are actually out.

The 1% is a very privileged club and you are not in it.

Those interested in truth see society as diverse. Those interested only in money, see division.

One must be humble in life, but humility doesn't make as much money as ego.

Most idiots would be in favour of a most brutal and savage revolution if it meant their side got into power.

There is no fix for society - you must understand and accept this.

Even if you tax the super rich at 99%, you still don't fix society's problems. You just create different ones.

Society has its dreams, which even if they materialized, wouldn't change much, or else would make things worse off.

Humility starves, that is why most lack it.

There are those who win the revolution and those that own it.

If you are going to opine, only do if you are paid for it.

Everyone lives as though there is gun pointed at them - the only difference through the ages is who is holding it.

Gratitude is the only sane response to an unjust fate.

Success is stumbling from mistake to mistake, until someone is prepared to pay you for one.

Those that rewrite the past cannot be trusted.

"I will figure it out," are the words every wife wants to hear from her husband.

Life is a labyrinth and you die without having found your way out. Perhaps the gods meant it this way.

You are not losing, you are learning.

The more lost the sinner, the faster they run away.

You don't get society as you want it, you get it as it is. You must play the hand you are dealt, not the hand you wish you had.

If half of society loves you, that only means that the other half despises you, or worst of all is indifferent to you.

You should never interrupt the fools as they are making you money.

There is no hope for those that are poor with money, to understand those that are good with it.

It is more satisfying for one to place blame externally, than accept ones limitations.

Sometimes the tragedy for one is they have a midlife crisis too late.

To think is like entering a bank vault that has no security.

One is so distracted in the smart-phone era, that they don't even realize they are distracted.

Is one running from the fear of death or the fear of life?

The worlds problems are infinitely more complicated than what the intellectual suggests the solutions for.

When life benefits you, you are happy. When it doesn't, you say "the system is broken."

You either have to have the best product or the cheapest. To be neither gets you nowhere.

The fallen always exist - as a cautionary tale.

Society is incredibly diverse - it contains numerous things that you agree with, equally so numerous things you dislike.

There is no one-size-fits-all self-help book. What works for one side, doesn't work for a different side.

Everyone would, were they granted total power, take what works, and replace it with what feels good to them.

To hate is the only way society can be tamed. Those that deviate must be despised to control others.

You need something to live for in life, without letting it consume you.

If you live life well, you need no second chances.

Do you really want to live in a society where every mistake is potentially fatal.

If we cannot even care for our home planet, what makes us believe we can for any other one?

You must take the hand dealt to you by fate and then play it as best you can.

Before one chooses who to kill, they choose their prophets that make them do it.

Society's laws, then gods and then yours, in that order. The danger then is when one doesn't have a god nor a society.

It is an inherently sick society, and just because you are popular within it, doesn't make you sane.

Everyone is an author of their circumstance.

So long as you are of the conviction that the other side is wrong, you have not life figured out.

One of the things Dostoyevsky alluded to in his great book Crime and Punishment is that we don't know what choices will kill us. After the choice can be very different to before it. It is rare for one to possess such wisdom and insight as to know what will destroy them - that is true knowledge as a human. Most of us only learn about what ruins us as it ruins us.

The giving-one-bad-advice industry is extremely profitable.

To catch ones attention you must present them something in such a way that they have both never seen nor heard of it before.

When you graduate from college, that is when the growing starts, not ends like it does for so many.

Without crime there can be no laws and hence chaos.

The method of accumulating vast wealth is to have people pay you for giving them a dopamine rush.

Who does the gambler blame when the bet is lost - himself or the horse? This is why sports fans get so angry when their team loses.

Those addicted to a dopamine rush only think short term - their next fix or score. They cannot think decades in advance.

No chess player knows every move. But the trick is to know more than your opponent. As it is in so many facets of life.

We are only all interested in one thing - money. To acquire much of it, you don't make this obvious.

A world of peace can never exist, and you wouldn't want to live in one if it did.

Economic growth is a tool not a trophy.

It is hardly the fault some successful individual on the other side of the world that you are an idiot.

There are few intellectuals harking on about what is good about society.

The fools are very impatient, which is understandable if you are addicted to the high of success. They expect a utopia and furthermore they expected it yesterday.

The most clichéd man of modern times is the outraged one.

When the man with a soul tries to make it big, things get dirty.

Give people a dream and they will follow the wicked wherever. Believe in wicked people and they will make you do the most wicked of things.

There is no such thing as universal advice - what benefits one, damages another. This is most indicative of the self-help industry.

You should never steal from the man who steals for a living - things get bloody.

There is nothing stronger than kindness.

In the healthy society, its people get to choose their dictators, every four years.

To have an opinion is the stupidest thing you can have, bar one exception, if you are paid well for it.

Without hunger and curiosity, you will be the same as everyone else.

When you enjoy a luxury, it becomes a necessity, despite your financial woes.

To accept that you are not right is to be able to see past your nose.

In crony capitalism, failure is not punished, but subsidized.

No matter how wise you are, you cannot rise all boats.

Control is the enemy of the free markets. The best economic systems can be summed up in three words - freedom, freedom, freedom.

If it is the judges neck the noose rests upon, well he wont be very fair.

Most of the time, when one thinks they are thinking, they are not thinking.

Courage is to hold your conviction in the face of grimaces.

Life moves on and it doesn't wait for you.

To face all the trials and grow old together, that is the meaning of life.

The man trying to do good by every one of societies executioners, suffers the most in life.

The intellectual is the smart one in the sense that it is he or she who gets paid, regardless of whether someone hates them or not.

Life is two books contradicting each other. Wisdom is to read both.

What are you afraid of losing in a world where nothing belongs to you.

It is not gaining freedom that counts, but what you do with it.

We have a million plans and our death isn't one of them.

No matter how much we live, it will never be enough, come our deathbed.

The Communist Manifesto is the most popular self-help book that has ever existed. And its not a very good one.

If you live by the credo of gratification, you will change job after job and relationship after relationship.

You are not right, you don't know everything and you are not an expert. Understand this to attain maturity.

You are either busy being a fool or busy making money.

If you want to save yourself, save others.

What would you do if you knew you only had three months left? That is what you should do right now.

Power is like heroin, once you have a taste of it, it is next to impossible to relinquish.

Every generation blames both the one before and after it.

Society can be divided into two groups - those trying to convince those that need convincing.

You are only ever as good as you were yesterday.

Choice either makes us a god or an apostate.

You cannot avoid chaos, only outmanoeuvre it.

The trick in life is to be the same man when fired as you were when hired. Be humble!

If you are reading a different book each week, you just become someone else's thoughts. The trick is to read one book and then obsess and ruminate over this book for years, thereby hopefully adding to its themes.

You don't like giving your money to the government, but don't care about what you give to the sports star. What's the difference!

Sometimes it better to ask for forgiveness than permission.

As the Bolsheviks demonstrated, every revolution has its winners and then its victors.

You manipulate one by convincing them they are right on the matter at hand.

Extreme problems require extreme solutions.

Every revolutionary believes that the new government will protect them.

The idealogue wants the present, future and past to be their concept of perfection.

What one discovers all too late, is it takes a lifetime to discover yourself.

Don't deceive yourself. That you may be college educated, have read all of Nietzsche and Dostoyevsky or whoever, that you are right, that you just know more than everyone else, and if only they were like you, then everything would be perfect. Everyone thinks like that, when true maturity is to stay silent.

In the healthy system, society is diverse. In the ill one, everyone is identical.

In a world where you either live or you starve, there is no time for doubts.

When poor, we pray to god, when rich, to ourselves.

What you want to be in life is to be someone who can lose a job, break up a relationship, be in oceans of debt, be hated by the community, and still get a good nights sleep.

Of course it challenges one, but is society better without its worst? I don't think it is.

The outraged think they could run heaven better than the gods. It could be a business, a sports company or a country, they think without thinking, that if you just did it their way, success would follow as sure as night comes after day. The one thing that there is an abundance of during a crises is the Dunning Kreuger Effect.

Everyone's convictions are a product of their own despair.

To view the world the same at forty as you did at twenty, means you have wasted two decades of your life.

Quite often in these rambling debates, what is needed is not better answers, but better questions.

We are condemned to earn money. If insanity was paid a salary, we would beg to be sectioned.

Sometimes it is better to be useless than useful.

We offer our opinion as though our family would be executed if we didn't.

The cruellest dictators are the ones inspired by works of fiction.

We tend not to acknowledge things, because in doing so we admit to failure.

Sometimes the problem needs stitches. Sometimes it needs open heart surgery.

You are what you refuse to become.

Change is swift. Economic stability not as much.

You are both your mistakes and ambitions combined.

If you speak well, you don't have to be very knowledgeable.

A war wages in the heart of man - what he should do and what he wants to do.

Those only interested in money have an opinion on everything.

Perception is the father of economies.

What the Marxist doctrine does to its mark is produce a dopamine rush so extravagant it is akin to the first time one tries heroin.

One is seldom grateful to those that improve their lives.

It takes great courage to no longer be a child.

To catch one's attention, you need to be hyperbolic, and not necessarily right. This is observed in most intellectuals - they say this is what is wrong with society, and therefore if you could just change what is at fault, we would all inhabit this utopia.

Life is not measured in years but moments.

What changes in life is time and not mans vices.

It is the big lie theory - give them someone or something to blame and then just keep on repeating it. The fascists and socialists make use of it alike. For the conservatives its the immigrants and for the liberals its the rich. Then a very small number of people in both groups profit immensely. And hypothetically even if you did what the "prophets" suggest, you just create a different set of problems. For example, if you just got rid of all the immigrants, society would still be flawed. Likewise if you redistributed all the capitalists wealth amongst the poor, they would blow through it in six months.

You have your plans. Life has its own.

God could be a liberal or a conservative and he still wouldn't get society right if he was.

Money is the chief motivation of any intellectual, but he doesn't mention that in the pitch.

Often you must move forward but sometimes you cannot unless you find your way back.

The modern individual is dissatisfied at work, dissatisfied in their relationship and dissatisfied alone. No wonder they become alcoholics.

Who actually profits from advice - the target or the giver of it!

The football fan is like the drug addict. He is chasing the high of victory.

Everyone has at some stage dreamt of being a dictator of their country. But how many of them dream of being good ones?

We are the universes mistakes, trillions by trillions.

Men fall in love with what they see. Women, with what they hear. That is why so many men lie.

Earth is life, but it wont be forever.

Progress never erases historical patterns, it just disguises them as something else.

"I don't know why people do that," translates to "I don't know why everyone just isn't like me."

What is good about society now, will be scandalous in a hundred years time.

The healthy society is one where mistakes are allowed.

The markets should always serve society and not the other way around.

There is no freedom within the system, you just get to live in a bigger prison.

How much blood has been spilled since the dawn of humanity, by soldiers doing the prophets' work!

When anxiety fades, caution goes with it.

Marxism is a drug, no better than Xanax.

There is a reason why we all get married. Its the same reason why we don't tell anyone about the sex worker we hired.

The fact that the most popular intellectuals tell you what's wrong about society, and not what is right about it, says so much about the modern man. People are doped in this utopian sedation, whereby they dream of this perfect society, rather than accept the reality they have for what it is.

There are only two groups in the modern discourse - one group says its all the man's fault, the other says its the woman's. When in reality, society is diverse.

The leaders are so afraid of being killed by the enemy that they end up killing us all.

The price you pay for a democracy is high, but for any other system it is higher.

A relationship is about duty not happiness.

If god were the police, we'd all be arrested.

It is a society where it is better to be popular than be right.

Confidence is a form of currency, as any economic meltdown shows.

Only in solitude can you be grateful. Everything else distracts you.

What use is wealth, if you cannot live with what you did to earn it.

We are all dreaming of what we would do with extreme wealth, not what it will do to us.

The world is full of people who look rich, living on someone else's money.

The criticizer assumes himself to be perfect. That he would not be criticized were he in the same position of the person he lambasts.

Hunger buys everything.

Real success lies in skills and not promises.

Classroom education gives you a career. Self-education will give you an advantage.

Very few of the ultra successful account for luck.

Humility tends not to garner a huge following.

The true measure of advice is the ratio between how many peoples lives it improves, versus how many peoples lives it does nothing for or makes worse.

All these elites are public no. 1 enemies, but cordial in private.

There are some questions man is not expected to answer.

Life is something you should always figure out yourself, and not through listening to the prophets.

Every dreamer is a dictator.

Love has become a type of consumerism, one in which we must experience a better high as each day passes. But how can the rush of the wedding be matched - that is why the divorce rate is so high I think, people cannot live up to each others initial highs.

Every generation, since the dawn of human civilization, is sure they have figured it out. But history has shown that it is both patient and painful.

When something works long enough, people stop asking why it does, and just assume it will.

Society doesn't work when its all about you.

The successful are the last people on the planet you should be taking advice from about how to be successful. Because so few of them account for luck.

We are still living through the revolution and always will be.

When it comes to the economic system, there is a hell of a lot of wrong ways, but no right way.

The like you on the way up, but they love watching you on the way down.

When daddy solved every problem for you when young, you grow up with the-grass-is-always-greener-elsewhere mantra.

When a million dollars does not suffice, you will be scammed in life. When you need more than much, you stumble.

If you are going to fool anyone, let it be the world.

In the future, the truth will be debatable.

The revolution you want is not always the revolution you get.

People expect to be happy and that society should be perfect - thus to make generate great wealth, you provide them with the illusion of these things

It is easy to fail at what you don't want in your heart.

A little of what will kill you, only makes you more resilient.

Your need for approval will make your life very lonely.

The world is not short of the self-help gurus prophesizing as to how the whole world can succeed, when it cannot.

Modern man is too consumed to see the end coming. Perhaps he is not meant to.

What we all share in common, from the rich to the poor, the black to the white, the happy to the unhappy, is we all can practise gratitude.

Everyone dreams of changing society, but most of the time society changes them.

All the conformists can do is come together and turn on the sinner, and it is very powerful.

When society is in trouble, the blame is always shifted to the powerful.

All the advice dished out by he intellectual is merely a confession of what worked for the said intellectual.

To mature is either a new beginning or the end of it all.

You are nothing unless you are the one leading the march.

There is a difference between being rich and being wealthy. Wealth is the multi-million mansion you chose not to buy.

We don't know what will kill us. That is why we die young.

You cannot create a pure society without getting dirty along the way.

Man is born frantically and his fall happens in slow-motion.

Unfortunately, ignorance and hubris makes more money in society than the opposite.

Being liked is the same as the gambler winning big. And just like the gambler, the need to feel this sedation becomes an addiction. Hence the billion dollar plastic surgery industry.

Growth is never exciting. That is why so many refuse it.

If you are lost in life, resentment and self-pity only makes things worse.

In the ruthless world of The American Dream, being "just there" is a death sentence.

Opinion represents ego. To have an opinion suggests that you are right. Therefore to be humble is to stay silent.

Society is a nation of addicts, chasing a high bigger than the one they got yesterday.

Everyone in the group tells each other they are not mad. This is how they are kept delusional.

Your calling isn't easy. If it was, it wouldn't be your calling.

Time takes everyone's dreams away.

The world is full of people who wouldn't even be able to run a banana stand, let alone a country, despite what they think.

Everything we do is to avoid despair.

It is better to believe that this life is all there is, than some divine kingdom in the clouds waiting for you.

The time to have hope is right now. Not yesterday or tomorrow.

In the ill society, they lock the city gates, not to prevent the monsters from coming in, but so no one can leave.

One of the best signs of a countries past is its architecture.

If you are fed, warm, have a shelter over your head, healthy, a good job, I wouldn't be complaining too much. And yet billions do.

Everyone's life is both a Cézanne and a Shakespearean tragedy.

The intellectuals have been prophesizing the end of the world for thousands of years, not to warn people, but to enrich themselves. There is no easier a method of accumulating wealth than telling one the tough times are on the way.

There is no difference between the degenerate gambler and the sports fan, and sometimes it is better to be the former, for every once in a while you win something tangible.

One is not cognizant of their limitations, nor that of society's.

What Marx did was give society a different blueprint for utopia, one which up to that point they had never seen before. It was akin to someone trying heroin for the first time. Bit like the narcotic in question, it ends badly.

We wonder why one can become propagandized, but just look at how many gamblers there are in society, throwing away their last dime on some horse.

In hindsight wisdom comes naturally.

If a delusion puts food on the table, we will gladly become insane.

No matter your wealth and achievements, you will become forgotten.

I think the psychiatrists make a mistake - they look at what enables people to live a long life and ignore those that lived happy ones.

It is as Herman Hesse speculated, your happiness is your responsibility.

There is no right answer, only the answer that suits you.

Don't lecture me on morality until you haven't eaten in two weeks.

It is not enough to live the good life - you must learn to struggle well too.

You may think of yourself as some genius, but sorry to say, based on the laws of probability you are not.

You may win everything in your chosen discipline, but you then forfeit everything in life.

What is beautiful now, was terrible once.

It is the nature of the genius to always perceive himself as a victim.

Life is for growth and self-discovery.

The simple life is laughed at - that is why so few follow it.

You must pick your burden in life and then bear it - neither is a winning play.

Not everyone who follows their passion, wins. Nor do those that play it safe. Choices, we live and die on them.

All these self-help gurus have their theories that fail when put into practise. Life lived is more complicated than advice given.

What we say is the cure to our existence is often the disease.

There is a term for being able to predict the future - its called insider trading.

It is language and eyesight combining that makes us perceive the world the way we do.

To be traumatized is to be manipulated.

If you cannot survive outside of the classroom, you will get nowhere in life.

When it comes to success - loyalty, discipline, and total commitment are non-negotiable.

If you fail education, but master life, that is a trade-off worth pursuing.

The most personal is the most creative.

If everyone was as good as you, equal and above your standards, then you would be the odd one out.

The 21st century man is caught in a desperate struggle not to be on the side of the truth.

Is the universe the tragedy or the matter that we cannot see it.

Youth is nothing to be ashamed of, but what is erroneous is never growing up.

Those that suffer the most are those that wish for no problems.

You could read a thousand self-help books, each with a different theme as to how to become happy, and you would still not attain this glorious life you dream of. That is how complicated life is.

To understand your society, you must first understand yourself.

The best life is the simple life.

It is within the depths of our greatest pain, that the self is revealed.

We only value time when it is running out.

It is the bad times that tell you what others think of you.

What is most difficult for one is to consider themselves an imbecile, let alone accept it.

A man can be a monument in the office or in the home, but never the two together.

Prison is a lonely place - so too is freedom.

It is losing it all that tells you so much about ones character.

A dictator despises diversity.

Motivation needs a hell to run away from and a heaven to run towards.

If you want to be better than others, be excellent at something other than your social skills. Don't be the person society likes, but the person society needs.

It is much better to be young and miserable, than dying and happy.

The intellectual generally only likes chatting to those that applaud him.

The best thing we can do with the past is understand it.

You believe you could never be wrong. Well then predict the future! Time judges us all fairly.

It is not the product you should fear but the individual behind it.

Sometimes because of the short term, you are denied a long term.

One should never underestimate mans conviction to do everything in return for nothing.

There are solutions, just not universal ones.

You excel relative to society, not necessarily to other things.

It is easy to make a dystopia - all you have to do is try to make a utopia.

You can be cancelled in so many ways now, that it is best to just keep quiet and do nothing at all.

Total annihilation is a decent reason to pick up guns.

If you have a brain, then you can change.

Small wins everyday amount to more than a big win once a month.

These self-help books don't achieve much because you still have to work in a job, raise a family, manage your presentation to the community etc.

A narcissist is someone who assumes that if everyone in the world was just like them, we would live in a utopia.

To understand a man you must understand his childhood.

When the gods roll the dice its the mortals that pay.

Power reveals the man.

There is a million ways life can go wrong, but only a few ways it can go right.

There is a price to paid regardless of choice - even immortality has its forfeiture.

It is next to impossible for the imbeciles not to be pretentious.

If no one knows who you are, then you don't have to apologize in life.

Life is what is, not what if.

The religious scriptures have prophesized utopia down through the centuries, which makes reality a disappointment.

Come every election day, the masses practically crawl over broken glass to be deceived.

When one loves the satisfaction they garner from their job, even more so than the money it provides, then the romantic relationship will not endure.

It is much more attractive to one to blame rather than transform.

Those that think they are geniuses are blind to their own flaws and biases.

Its not enough to sell the product, you must also be able to sell yourself too.

Children have to be let figure it out themselves. If you intervene and try to create this perfect child, you become like Dr Frankenstein.

You can go your own way, but know you will be hated for it.

It is the most stupid of people that make the most effective dictators.

There is little a philosophy can do when you have to pay bills. The self-help industry is like the gambling industry - the degenerate gambler is seduced by the prospect of winning - so too is the reader of some new self-help book, they get a dopamine rush, thinking about how they can transform their lives. And then everything just resets to normal a week after they have read the said book. Likewise, if you think of some nefarious hedge fund broker, he markets himself as though he has found some new edge over the stock exchange and therefore if you invest in him, he will make you a multi millionaire. Similarly with a self-help author - they suggest a new way to become happy and that seduces and sedates their victim.

The victim-industrial-complex is worth billions in the west.

Never tell a man "it won't work." Never tell a woman "to calm down."

Children make fun of children. What is terrible is to make fun of yourself.

In public the elites are enemies, but the best of friends behind closed doors.

The compounding of averageness creates genius over time.

When everyone tells you that you are insane, you either are or you are a genius.

If you listen to the experts of present, there is no uniqueness in the future.

It is not being alone that matters, but what makes you feel lonely.

God has his laws as does man - man has his demons as does god.

Everyone has their right and wrong within the same society.

Curiosity is what makes you see things others cannot.

Is man his achievements or his mistakes or both?

The future is written in uncertainty.

The good parent promotes conformity. The ill parent either creates a criminal or a genius.

Financial collapse of a country always happens before physical collapse.

Tough people outlive tough times.

To the unintelligent, things are either exceptional or falling apart, when in reality they are something in-between.

Without discipline, life goes nowhere.

Success is a lottery. What matters is the people believe they can win.

Every end is just a new beginning.

The intellectual gains attention from criticizing some intellectual who existed 50 years ago. Then fifty years later, another intellectual criticizes the intellectual that criticised the original intellectual.

To the naïve, one is either a god or a deviant, when in-between lies us all.

When crime gets easier, society gets more difficult, which pushes people into crime.

It is pointless debating with those who are impervious to having their minds changed.

What we absolutely despise in life is to see people we don't like doing well.

What you want in life is a level of notoriety that enables you to make a good living, but that doesn't kill you.

What every intellectual understands, is that for every person that hates his philosophy, another person buys his book.

It is how you respond to stress that will determine you.

Everyone is looking down at someone and is also terrified at becoming those they look down at.

If we all have high IQs, then none of us have them.

The rich fund ideologies that justify the exploitation of the middle class.

The hard times aren't coming - they are already here and always have been.

Which is better - to live a long life or to live a good one?

We only focus on the winners in society. We don't see all the dreamers waiting tables for 12 hours a day.

Life is worthless for those that don't know how to live.

The poor that imagine themselves as millionaires, tend to vote for the elites.

When I suggest man fears being known, I don't mean literally, but that he constantly adjusts his appearance and thought process in response to being observed. Man is akin to quantum mechanics - he is nothing until seen.

When we are desperate to find our way in life, we get lost more easily.

Life is what you do as you search for a better one.

Who you want to become is someone who sees how fortunate they are in life.

When there is money on the line, you are quick to offer your advice.

The most dangerous animal alive is the human sitting beside you on the bus.

Success may or may not lead to happiness, but happiness always leads to success.

The more ones believes themselves to be correct, the more obscene the absurdities they will justify.

If it makes your life more difficult, is it worth it?

There are homeless people lining the streets of any major city that followed their passion when young.

The ruling class are ruled by the rich.

We are of the conviction that those better than us cannot relate to us.

It is most difficult for one to not have an opinion on matters.

The outraged are prone to being misled.

Society is diverse - rich and poor, intelligent and stupid, happy and unhappy.

Evil that is lawful is always the most obscene.

It all ends in regret - it is just a question of by how much.

Just because someone is wrong, doesn't make you right, and vice versa.

The war to be approved has been fought since the dawn of human civilisation.

The system cannot be changed - the people in it can be though.

When you become accustomed to luxury, equality feels like oppression.

If everyone is worth 20 million dollars, then no one is a multi millionaire.

A content slave has no reason to rebel.

If we lived forever, nothing would ever get done.

In the world of victims, few possess the courage to doubt themselves.

Who wants wealth just to give it all away and become poor again. That is why these revolutions never amount to much. Most revolutions change the status and not the status quo.

You have to be prepared to question the man that promises a better world.

We become what everyone else is - this is our life sentence.

Nothing hurts youth as much as being unseen.

Most only try to win. Few try not to lose.

Where does earning money end and morality take over?

For a woman, a man that met 80% of her expectations, still would not be good enough for her.

Society lionizes its winners, not the losers as much.

Success is working 25 hours a day, 8 days a week. Few have the time to pursue such endeavours.

Wouldn't it be great if you could just blame the state of your existence on one thing, yet the truth is many factors are at play.

You either have an attitude of how lucky you are or else an attitude of how much more you need.

Those that got married, say you shouldn't, and those that are single in their sixties, wish they did. I guess whatever path you go down, you have regrets.

God could write a book on how to be successful and happy in life, and it still wouldn't be universal.

Whenever any intellectual says the solution to some problem in society is "simple," he or she is deluded.

Man cannot bear a meaningless life.

There are numerous wrong ways to live, but no right way.

The humble intellectual is usually broke.

We have a noun for everything that hurts us.

Don't destroy my home and then ask why I point my gun at you.

Those with great imaginations are always misunderstood initially.

What is better in life doesn't mean it is good.

You don't want to be both perfectly moral and immoral in life.

There are millions who would gladly trade places with you in life.

It is not enough to be, you must become. To be born is to be - to mature is to become.

The educated don't usually question what they are taught - this makes them very effective soldiers for the economy.

If you are intelligent, the best thing you can do because of it is be grateful.

Most cannot handle being disliked - that is why they commit atrocities.

When the intellectual says he has it figured out, he only means for himself.

Without discipline in life you will suffer.

The intellectual catches your attention by saying the world is doomed. Then he empties your bank account by telling you the solutions.

In the healthy marriage, it is you and your partner against the world, not because of it.

The pain of loss is a much better teacher than the ecstasy of winning.

Things you seek from others, you can give yourself.

You are doing two things simultaneously, living and dying. But that is better than just dying.

There is no universal fool-proof advice that benefits the whole of humanity. Instead some advice benefits some set of people, but doesn't benefit a different set. What you can do despite this is be grateful, but if you are starving, you cannot eat gratitude.

Everyone has their dreams until the rent is due.

No one in life is truly alone for they have the universe to keep them company.

Life is curt and no one can die for you. Nor can they live your life for you.

You don't learn from winners - you learn from those who have won, lost and then won again.

Are you depressed or just miserable?

The problem with consumerism is we then all try to outcompete each other.

In democracy, change can happen, but great change in a society requires a dictator.

To appreciate the talent you need to be within the standard deviation of that talent.

Its not the revolution that you should worry about, but those running it.

People don't know what freedom is until they no longer have it.

There is nothing as evil as wanting to be called a good person by everyone.

One is seldom cognizant of how ignorant they are. And even if they were, they wouldn't admit it.

To be the most confident person in the room, isn't always a good thing.

Why are people unhappy? There must be thousands of reasons. But here's the thing, there is no system where everyone is happy.

The problem isn't so much that you have not attained what you are looking for, but rather that you are looking for something in the first place.

Unless you are being paid to have an opinion, you shouldn't have one.

There is no standard level of maturity - maturity in good times is radically different to that of harsh times.

Everyone is trying to outsmart everyone else in a world where most are not rewarded for it.

What is better than memorizing what is deemed correct is to ask better questions.

The system is built to create workers, just not happy ones.

People become lost when the world changes faster than they do.

Its better to be broke than be in a terrible job.

Such is human culture, a saint to one is always a sinner to someone else.

How many self-help books have there been in the last fifty years? Thousands upon thousands and people are still searching for happiness. Perhaps you are not actually meant to get it as a human. We spend a life time trying to become content, when life is what happens during that time.

You are living in a system where everyone can be a loser, but not everyone can be a winner.

To be successful, you don't have to predict the future 100% - you just have to predict it better than your competitors.

Anyone can fall in love, less can stay that way.

Success is often based on being the right person, in the right place, at the right time.

The revolution does not yield utopia, just different problems.

One is closer to irrelevancy than they are to god - the universe is indifferent.

A huge part of being incredibly successful, is being incredibly lucky. And just like the lotto, only a small minority ever get to be this lucky in life.

The lie of the intellectual is that there is prosperity for all, if you just do what he suggests. Prosperity for all is a liar and it is the liar that prospers.

The intellectual does not accumulate wealth by telling you what is right with the world.

The world could be better. But it also could be much worse. Where you stand on this argument says so much about you.

There is a place for everyone in society, even the misunderstood.

Shortcuts in life are scams.

It is what you have done in life that makes you attractive and not what you say you will do.

The past is history, the future might not even come, that is why you must live in the present.

Curiosity is more advantageous than certainty.

A good psychologist tells you what is wrong with you. A great one tells you what is both wrong and right with you.

Confidence without humility is the killer of kings.

If you believe you are the smartest person in the room, you are in the wrong room.

You can walk into any room, but some rooms you cannot walk out of.

Trauma is not what was done to you - it is what happened inside of you as a result of what was done to you.

Society is not a mystery, society is diverse, and therefore full of people behaving irrationally.

How the intellectual accumulates his wealth is through proposing simple solutions to very complex problems. You often see on social media: "Do these five things to change your life." In reality peoples difficulties in life are far more complicated.

Opportunity yields opportunity.

Don't listen to the person who says "listen to me!"

First they ban one thing, then another, and another, until you find yourself on a crowded carriage heading East.

To mature you must cease thinking about what you want or need, and instead fixate on how lucky you are to be alive in this universe.

It is easy to be cruel. To be good takes effort.

Value the child and they will value their existence.

People do not obey the majority, they become it.

Dissociation creates a vacuum in the mind where loyalty can be inserted.

When everything is taken from you, the person that gives it all back, becomes your messiah.

Evil is often a committee where everyone has one vote.

What these Marxist intellectuals know full well is that if you use fancy language you can manipulate anyone. And that is exactly what they do.

When man is distracted with consumerism, he does not need to be punished into obedience.

What the average Marxist follower must understand is that the revolution they dream of, will be much worse than what already exists.

It is better to be wrong and have money, than be right and broke.

The poor understandably tend to believe anything that will alleviate their position. That is how the scammers and Marxist intellectuals profit.

Looking backward can move us forward. The pain of the past only needs to hurt us once. Learn from it, get better from it, move on.

It is most dangerous as an adult to have no regrets as a child.

Curt questions don't always have curt answers.

People don't know what they want - they often must be told.

The miracle of existence is no match for starvation.

As humans we are great at solving problems, except our own.

These self-help gurus love dishing out these ten step guides to a better life, none of which they make use of themselves. Happiness, success, stability etc. is a lot more complicated than a set of instructions.

Those thinking in terms of romance, are not thinking in terms of control.

Chasing zeros when you already have enough to last a thousand years, this destroys people. If you have plenty, but want more, you risk losing it all.

To rule you must be unpredictable.

The pharaohs of todays world are the boardrooms.

You can take something so simple and package it up in fancy nouns and verbs and adjectives, and they will adore you for it.

The language afforded to one, and hence used by one, either makes them look like a genius or an idiot.

Every intellectual, be they a dictator or a college lecturer, is sure they have it all figured out. An intellectual is someone who is an expert in what they don't know.

The way to crush a society is to make them forget where they came from.

The great moments in life cannot be bought.

Those that have had dysfunctional childhoods are either next to useless as adults or else possess a resolve not seen in others.

The smartest person in the room is he or she who knows what will kill them.

People are great at getting married - they are not so good at being married.

You cannot know what happiness is unless you were unhappy at sometime in the past. Those that have had excellent childhoods don't know what happiness actually is, ironically because they were happy most of the time. Thus they search and search for some high of greater intensity than they experienced as a child, which makes them miserable. Happiness is inherently relative - you need the bad to know what is good. A life less suffering is no life at all.

True wisdom is to learn from the present and past, such that you can predict the future with less error than someone else.

You are not in a position to tell the truth if you are sitting on a thirty year mortgage - instead you are shackled by the group.

For the power hungry, staying there is more important than the prosperity of the culture at hand.

Maturity is no match for being shamed - that is why everyone lives predictable lives. One is fated to never find themselves, because if everyone did, society would implode.

Victim championships is a sport with no winners.

There is no equitable society. Instead there are imbalances. But the minorities don't like this. Understandably, for who likes being labelled an minority!

The system is run by those you have never even heard of.

Everyone is one bad decision away from suicide.

The losers of any revolution are nearly always its youth.

When you are left to your own devices on social media, telling you how great you are, and how you deserve better, it feeds your ego, and makes you do terrible things.

Life is to be lived as death gives no refunds.

You have violence in the world not because of late stage capitalism, but because that is just way the world is. And even if you did it a trillion ways, not one, not one single method will yield the utopia the Marxists think society deserves.

When god ignores you, the devils hand is welcomed.

What you want is not just freedom but opportunity - freedom means nothing without it.

When one is bored in paradise, hell becomes meaningful. Man could thrive in hell, but he would commit suicide in heaven.

The man on the road is lonely, so he best be able to deal with this.

A lot of interesting people are full of contradictions - they can yearn for love, yet push it away when it comes their way.

You exist and life is the price you pay for that.

The danger is that you go so extreme in your thought that need to the James Webb Space Telescope to see what is considered rational.

What is most difficult for one to realize is just how ignorant they are. Even the college educated class are blind to this.

What modern society represents, is good people at their absolute worst.

The road to dystopia is the same road to utopia.

It isn't a question of whether the relationship can survive the uncertainty but the mundane.

I matured when I went from having the solutions for everyone to only having them for myself.

Ideas are not just ideas, but weapons.

When a society's prosperity comes before everything, it justifies anything.

You must have three things to be content - somewhere to go, something to do and someone to love.

We fall in love very quickly and fall out of love very slowly.

Refusing gratification short term means to be great in the long term.

Solutions, even for the most basic of societal problems, are never as simple as declared.

A lot of your failures in life are not your fault, but neither are your successes.

Every crisis has its experts and then its "experts."

It is rare for a man to be the same after tragedy as he was before it.

The fool has an answer for every question put to him.

The most dangerous people are those willing to choose the short term over the long term, again and again and again.

We are a world of people seeking redemption.

Life may not have any meaning, but that does not mean you cannot be grateful.

The worst mistake is the one we don't learn from.

One is born a cliché, and if you are intelligent, you spend your life trying not to be.

Society is basically those in power and those that want it. And you always have those two battling it out.

Diversity is the healthy society. The unhealthy one is where one group has a monopoly.

The worst side to be on is either, when it comes to politics, because then you must consent to whatever madness the retrospective side adopts.

Every intellectual believes to their core, that if everyone looked like them, spoke like them and thought like them, unhappiness would be eradicated in modern society.

Sometimes the most heinous person in someone's life is the one that believes in them.

As important to stand up, is to stand for something.

Our sole motivation is money, the most honest of us, the best of us, the saints even.

When the truth is unbearable, people tend to latch onto conspiracies.

The difference between who you are and what you want to be, will be the size of your misery.

With the narcotics, life is more fun in the short term, but there is no long term.

Diversity is the joy of humanity.

The healthy man wants a million things - the dying man only wants one.

How to live the authentic life is the ultimate mystery to man.

To be successful, you have to think in terms of decades and not days.

It is very easy for the ultra rich to say what they would do if they were broke.

To be hated by the Marxists means you are doing something right.

If you can get out of the group and not pay a heavy premium, this is what I would strongly suggest you do.

Give everyone a voice and you get a society of "experts."

What money buys you is influence.

When life is simple it is easier.

A different world does not necessarily mean it is better because of it.

War is needed if only to put the good times in perspective.

The people who don't care about money are the ones who have lots of it.

The innocent are not always innocent.

Like the protagonist of the great novel Crime and Punishment, we have no idea how we will react to what we do. We assume from youth that our choices are bullet-proof, yet they can destroy us as adults.

The poor kill others, the rich kill themselves.

Nobody cares about you unless you are famous or infamous.

The intelligent woman chooses comfort above all else.

Perhaps things in life aren't terrible, but flawed, and there is a subtle difference.

The duty of love is to enable you to see the good in the world.

The mark of the smart individual is to want success but not fame.

They can take your house, your car, your job, your money, but not what you know.

How you handle the trauma of youth will be the making of you.

Good leadership is about listening and learning.

Everyone faces challenges - what separates us is how we respond to them.

Those that are successful often fall into the trap of hubris in that they think they know what it takes for everyone in society to mimic them.

If you asked a million people, a billion would tell you how to be successful in life.

The multimillionaire just thinks about all the money he made the past year, seldom about all those who helped him accumulate it.

They are quick to tell you how they got rich, not so quick to say how they lost it all.

Ambition is nothing without resolve - without the ability to handle immense pressure, you will fall at the first hurdle.

It is easy to be grateful when life is good. The trick is to have when you have lost everything.

If its an issue of survival, you will tend to do the darkest things possible, and justify them.

Hell is ourselves when others look at us.

The solutions to ones life are far more complicated than a sentence or a ten minute YouTube video.

The good times corrupt man. Hell at least teaches him something.

The most dangerous person in the world is a broke and lonely man.

The bigger the wedding, the quicker the divorce.

Try to live as though you are poor with lots of money.

When you lack critical thought, you tend to judge.

Society is always in a two step process of decay and rebirth.

Only the broken have the wings to fly.

The abused child pays the ultimate price as an adult.

Risk either builds you or kills you.

You don't want to out-trauma someone else's trauma. That is the diseased life.

When the alternative is unbearable, you will persist in delusion.

Life is failure after failure. Happiness is learning from each of them.

When you love someone, you love them for who they are, not what you want them to be.

Most people do things just about good enough not to get fired.

What is a certainty to occur in life is you will meet someone better than you, or someone who got the better of you.

The true punishment of one isn't the steel bars but the stigmatization by others.

Most do not know, as Fyodor Dostoyevsky wrote a book about, what choices are going to crush them, until after they have made them.

The dilemma for one is what enables them to live, often also kills them.

When the people are angry, that is when they start blaming the wrong things.

What makes a culture great is when you provide opportunity, not take it away.

Everyone has faults to their name, including yourself, and not just those you don't like.

If you are going to promise the world anything, let it be that you will learn from your mistakes.

Money can buy lots of things but not time.

It is not about living most, but living best.

It is the fate of all non-conformists to be misunderstood.

The capitalist would destroy everything just to stay ahead.

If there is one thing in life that deserves consequence it is risk.

Most degrees are useless including PhDs - most employers ask can you start on Monday and fix the problem by Tuesday.

Man lives many lives as an adult, but he only ever has one childhood.

The smart man observes the world as is, not as he wishes it to be.

To thrive is to not hesitate.

The ultimate aim is to live a long life in such a way that you don't have to be cautiously looking over your shoulder the whole time.

We tend to despise those that deny us our dopamine rush, be they a football club or a politician.

How others see us, how they interpret us, becomes our conscience.

What the average intellectual does, is take what someone said, say its incorrect or incomplete, change it around and declare it as truth, until someone else comes along a short while later and does the exact same to them.

Be alone in life and be comfortable with it.

It all ends badly if left long enough, but that is not an excuse to not do it.

If we lived forever, how then could we live with ourselves, with our own shame?

Its the questions we don't like to touch, that say so much about a society.

A strong community, that is nearly always the motivation for any new law.

Both sides try to speak for your interests, but both sides cannot be right.

Don't listen to the person who has the solutions - for success, wealth, happiness etc. Listen to the person who is humble enough to admit the don't have all the answers.

The reason they ban prostitution but not pornography is because women are avid users of the latter.

If you gave everyone the chance to be king, most would start constructing gulags.

Whatever the choice at hand, it isn't worth it if you kill yourself because of it.

The only thing worse than dying young is dying old without ever having lived.

When money loses its morality, a country rots. It is not a good thing when a culture gets wealthier faster than it gets wiser.

When the institutions lose their credibility, the individuals lose their responsibility.

The whole financial system is a belief system - once trust evaporates, the castle sinks.

If you want to know what the poor think of the system, just look at who they make their saviour.

You cannot beat statistics, no matter how special you think you are.

The demise is always slow at first and then quick.

We have always had the outraged class, but we haven't always had the medium for them to express this outrage.

You are only ever an expert of your time.

We are victims of what we know given the age.

The heart gets you in trouble sometimes.

Who desires power just to give it away.

The world is a terrible place where people want your wife, your house and your life, and that is your friends. God only knows what your enemies want of you.

When the pendulum doesn't swing back, that is when you know the world has changed.

In three words I can sum up what it takes to be successful - work, work, work.

We are happy for others to lead, but not for them to win.

It is unbearable for one to perhaps admit that they are wrong.

You cannot build without first destroying.

The self-help industry is akin to a get rich quickly investing scheme.

Every new beginning is not easy. The avalanche that changed humanity began as a snowflake.

A man can be violent, but a woman will wield the full force of the community to punish him.

If you put the intellectual in heaven he would say it is in decline. And that he has the solutions to make it perfect.

To the would-be dictator it is better to be cruel than be incompetent.

With every new law one of two things happens - either it makes things worse or it makes things better. But I can say with absolute certainty that it wont make things perfect.

Everyone dreams of a different world rather than accept the one they have.

Sometimes our dreamers need saving from themselves.

Nobody who found great success in life fell there - it took years of dedication and perseverance. Vincent Van Gogh didn't paint Starry Night in an hour but twenty years.

Most of the world are children, despite the ages of them.

The more the mob love one, the more they will hate the same person, if they don't live up to their fantasy.

When people don't understand something, they create their own answers.

The best thing about lots of money is influence.

Wars are won and lost by banks.

When greed meets weak regulation, collapse is inevitable.

You can always tell the most brainwashed of all, because they simply have no understanding of the concept of forgiveness. Instead they want to punish, and if that does not suffice, punish more and harder.

The worse thing the rich do is take from the poor in their country and give it to the poor in a different country.

The possessed don't have an ideology - an ideology has the possessed.

It is easier to avoid than be comfortable with a uncomfortable truth.

When you don't face your own vulnerabilities, you focus on others instead.

People want you to be a good person, but not be better than them.

It is better to be alone than have the wrong people in your life.

When the rat cage gets smaller, the rats turn on each other.

Ironically war brings communities together as they are now on the same side against a common enemy.

In an unstable asylum, stability is like being its king.

The guilty ruminate over past mistakes, but never the mistakes they never made.

Most people don't know what cruelty they are capable of.

Every theory has its critiques.

Don't think of your mistakes - look at how far you have come.

Even the most modest of hearts has a touch of evil to it.

The future is just a method of anticipation and that is why those that dream of being happy in it are always disappointed.

We cannot see the world from the perspective of everyone, only ourselves. If we did we could then accept views that contradict our own.

If you want to know how one behaves behind closed doors, look at how their children turn out.

Everyone is your friend until you are better than them.

Every well intentioned decision has unintended consequences.

The child that fails to understand is the fault not of them but of the teacher.

Even the friendliest of divorces is a horror movie.

Every smile has its story, but every grimace is a novel.

It is possible for two people to be in argument with each other and for neither of them to be right.

Self-betrayal is the worst betrayal.

When you are a winner, it is easy to say you will never do this and do that.

Only if you walk ten miles barefoot can you appreciate your shoes.

Unless marriage solves a problem, then it will not last.

Those who think the grass is greener elsewhere, tend to be very lonely in life.

The authoritarian mechanism is not open to debate.

Society is healthy when it is diverse, where even the most braindead idiot can become the king. The danger then is if he does.

There is no solutions for all - at best the majority benefits, at worse only a minority. But the bureaucrats love certainty and therefore believe those who promise utopia.

When you keep reading, but stop thinking, you are essentially dead.

There is no such thing as a successful person, just failures who kept at it.

You either learn to fail or you fail to learn.

The dangerous individual loves the idea of society in their perspective.

To survive in this world doesn't mean you are unbreakable, but have been broken and pulled through.

The ending of a society usually occurs in ways that were not predicted by even its smartest members.

The gullibility that put the Bolsheviks in power is the same gullibility that makes Manchester United the best supported football club in the world. The gullible chase the dopamine rush of success - that is what makes them susceptible to the would be powerful.

If they feed us when we are starving, we don't care how they did it.

The past eats the abused, as does the future the dreamer. Both are anxious.

The intellectuals, regardless of whether its through a book or a YouTube video, all follow the same pattern - "this is what is wrong with your strategy and this is what you must do to make it right." But between the intellectual and their audience, only one is guaranteed to make money and you can guess which one.

You complain about the capitalists hoarding all the wealth and yet here you are watching the Super Bowl or the Champions League final - the hypocrisy. I guess if they entertain you, you will love them regardless.

When money moves, politics soon follows.

Failures pave the way for breakthroughs - trying, failing, learning and then trying again.

Society is such that you will never run out of things to be angry about.

Sometimes you have to give up blaming, if you want to live, and you don't have much time to do this. As the saying goes, life can only be understood backwards, but must be lived forwards.

You never run out of time to redeem yourself.

The one who retires before age 35 isn't the one with the best grades or the hardest working or the one most willing to adapt, it is the one with the most creativity. Remember this.

Most of society don't know what is both good and bad for them.

If you condemn them to purgatory, don't be surprized when they send you to hell.

To truly be original you must not be on the side of the executioners.

You would be astounded as to how cruel those that want equality are.

The honest man is a humble man.

In modern society your peers are also your competitors.

The people to analyse and mimic are not the ones who have excellent interpersonal skills and made it to the top, but the ones who have terrible interpersonal skills and also made it to the top, for they are the ones who have it.

We would prefer to be approved than to get things done.

Nothing damages a child as much as conditional love.

First the cult leader dominates his audience, then he manipulates them.

We are a nation of dopamine addicts. This explains the world.

The best way to bedazzle an audience is make sure they don't understand a word you are saying. This is what the cult-leader-intellectual does most effectively.

"What is freedom?" This the question that no one has the answer to. We all want it, but don't know what it is.

The secret to success is not to be good, but to convey the appearance of being so.

Everyone is born an executioner. It takes maturity to overcome this predilection.

There are a billion things wrong with society. But there are a billion things right about it too. It is just the latter doesn't catch your attention as much as the former.

The one with the worst trauma gets the best engagement. That is why so many want to be the victim.

Some people just cannot be helped.

Even bright smart people are incredibly naïve.

Those that inherit great wealth are often crippled by it.

Sometimes the only response to stupidity is to let it be and hope they figure it out themselves.

Every devil to one is a saint to someone else.

A movement is progressive so long as you agree with it.

Enable them to buy fancy things and they wont care what political system is in power.

Patriotism is like a heavy drink - too much of it and it clouds your reason.

Without the criminal class there would be nothing to unite us, and more importantly nothing to talk about.

If you can conquer your desire you can conquer anything.

Hypergamy is a poison to women and thus society.

I am no prophet, nor is anyone. I am just trying to make you think.

You cannot become happy - you can only be happy.

You cannot save yourself if you cannot save others.

Even if you gave people what they wanted, or better, gave them what they needed, they would still be miserable. What if it is mans dissatisfactions that give him satisfaction! If you gave man what he dreamed of, it would destroy him - if you gave him utopia, he would hate you for it.

Hell would be going to heaven and the people you despised on Earth are there.

The price of a good life is a broken heart at the end.

Everyone has a masterpiece within them, but not everyone has the time.

The amount of glee one radiates when they speak. To have an opinion is dangerous hubris, the kind that kills you.

If you are clichéd, you cannot make much money in this world.

Part of the Marxist doctrine is to convince the target that by adopting the said philosophy they are smarter than everyone else who isn't a Marxist. And it is really powerful - being told that you are genius is much more sedating than being condemned as a fool. This is what the Marxist cult leader of the given age specifically teaches his disciples - thereby manipulating them not for their good, but his own.

If you want the best house, the best car, the best job, the best partner, the best life, you will get none of them.

Unfortunately those that are clichéd in life don't realize they are.

It is better to be misunderstood than to be a cliché.

If you have no problems in life, then you are the problem.

In denying ones delusion, they feel they have been annihilated. That is why they get so angry.

We are born lost and condemned never to find ourselves. Thus we must make do with this.

If you get to choose what to worry about in life, you are a fortunate person.

The man without haters and enemies, lived a very safe life.

If you have the answers in life, you are in truth not asking the correct questions.

If you want to know the truth, look at the hand the rich are playing.

God was drunk when he created the universe.

Eternal life will only work if we have a one day memory.

Which would you rather - immortality or the ability choose when and how you die?

Every day someone says society will implode and yet the sun continues to rise the next morning. Every professional has their own worst case scenario based on their profession, be they an economist, a AI engineer or a plumber.

Living is whatever prevents you from despair.

Your self-belief is the only thing you should be delusional about.

You would really want to be comfortable with not being liked in life. That is if you want to live a happy one.

Those without failings are those that never try anything.

You cannot control those who do not need approval.

To face the dawn, everyday, that is what separates us.

Existence is about what you build for yourself. It is not about finding yourself, which will only make you more lost. It is not about finding your way in life as much as it is going it.

You have zero insight into what you can be made to believe. When you seek approval you open yourself open to indoctrination. It doesn't matter if the cult is 200 people or 200 million.

It is about who wins tomorrow as much as it is today.

I'm surprised god doesn't commit suicide given all the pain in human civilization. I know I would were I in his position.

The best judge, jury and executioner, is time itself.

Try to find a headstone in all the cemeteries in the world that says "I wish I worked harder."

Success is persistence, not consistence.

If you get married and have three children, you will just repeat what you have learned. To make real advancement in society requires devotion to solitude.

We are born and we die and in-between we live pointless lives.

If everyone got justice in life, the streets would be empty.

Everyone sees society from their perspective, not as it is.

By needing more you will waste your life.

When the family unit disintegrates, so too do the institutions.

The man that perpetually looks at his bank balance, can never be content.

The best way to have it is to not know where you are going in life.

One cannot figure life out if they are deprived of the time to do so.

Everyone says it eventually, for whatever the reason: "Damn, I am getting old."

Despite what is suggested as the path to fulfilment in life, the best thing you can do for the world is to have children. But what is good for the world isn't always good for you.

We tell ourselves the lies that enable us to go on.

As the rich know all too well, if you throw enough money at a problem, it is no longer a problem.

The plan is that plans change.

Society is full of diversity. The solutions for one person are poison to someone else. However what all can do is be grateful.

When the hunter kills an animal, he is a monster. When the butcher does it, he is revered. Context is everything.

When a society gets paranoid, it has a tendency to see witches everywhere.

Most times it is better to be humble. But on occasion being an arrogant son of bitch is called for.

It is not what is true - it is what the majority believes.

When the institutions are on your side they are functioning. But when they go against your judgement you call them corrupt.

In the democratic country, it is the majority that is the dictator.

Giving freedom to most is pointless as they lack the insight to properly use it.

Anyone can kill, but not everyone can live with it.

It is always a question of whether a new law makes things better or makes things worse, but it will not make things perfect.

Ones dream of utopia is a world in which everyone agrees with them.

Why when people like you do you like yourself? It is because when they approve of you, you get a dopamine rush. You are essentially an addict, a smile is your heroin.

The man with regrets suffers more than the man that lacks them, but paradoxically he lives longer because of it.

God gives the dice, but he doesn't roll them.

You want to live your life in such a way that if you got a second chance to live it, you would do it the same way again.

It is pointless to scale the mountain by yourself.

The mob only focuses on the loud, which leaves the door open for the manipulator to attain his power.

The terrible are rewarded - the good, yes, just not as much.

What works on the battlefield doesn't on the high-street and vice versa.

What is good for those in power is at odds with those crushed by them.

In order for ones fantasy to mature, thousands more must be disappointed.

Evil only works if they are allowed to write the rules.

Let us not deceive ourselves, most are not winners nor losers, but average.

Society doesn't reward the talented, but the medium, he or she who is seen.

It is a cancer to believe you are right.

You over discipline your children so they will become an accountant instead of a plumber, the result will be that they become neither.

It is insane in that in America you have young kids wearing 100 dollar trainers, sipping an 8 dollar Frappuccino, browsing the internet on their 1000 dollar phone, saying they are oppressed by the system.

The difference between heaven and hell, is that in hell everyone pays the same amount of tax.

If you keep running away, you cannot live.

The very person that says they are immune from propaganda is precisely the person that gets manipulated by it.

It is very difficult for one to realize when they are emotional.

The way to make them hate is to make them adore. If they are made idolize one side, what follows from this is that they are by default made to hate the opposing side.

Everyone looks at the sky on a clear night, but few ask why is there something and not nothing.

The real struggle in life is who to trust.

Progress only begins where certainty ends.

If you want to be excellent, you must first be terrible, then average, then great.

Those that are humble, that admit they don't have the solutions for the whole of society, tend not to make much money.

The mentor and the tormentor are sometimes the same person.

Life is not happiness after happiness, but crisis after crisis. To be content is to find some solace in this.

Existing in society, in this field of labelling, where one can be observed and hence is threatened with stigma, influences how one thinks and behaves. Some are extroverted because of it and some go insane. Ones response to been seen by others is to behave as is expected given the circumstance. But what if this been seen by society is malfunctioning and induces psychosis. This is what I feel is a component of schizophrenia (if you read my book "The Labelling Phenomenon: Volume 2.") I think their madness is a result of being seen in society, or at least a part of it is.

If you know exactly how much money you have, you don't have much.

The surest sign of an economic default is when a country cannot pay for its bread.

Everyone likes to think they are different than their detractors, yet we all seek the same things.

The universe is the answer, but we don't know what the question was!

Being afraid of what everyone thinks of you is akin to locking yourself in solitary confinement.

Without something to live for, to push you through the tough times, you will probably commit suicide.

You may be tired but there is a life to be lived.

It is better to be optimistic over pessimistic, but insane levels of both are detrimental to the cause.

If only we could control how famous we become.

If you want to live a long life, find something to worry about, that doesn't cause you to kill yourself.

One is only as good as those that face them given the time.

Tragedy should be predicted, not just left to happen.

Utopia is not utopia - it is a flawed society.

What the vast majority of voters are not cognizant of at all, is that they are always disappointed with whoever they voted into power.

To ascend positions of power, to lie is a necessity, not optional.

A war is declared in hours but started over years.

The actual politician that dares augment the status quo, either gets imprisoned or killed.

I wonder what will be the last question of the last human alive? And who or what will answer him?

The worst thing you can do in life is join a side. The best thing you can do is profit off the battle between the sides.

To dare is to dare to live.

One thinks there should be no crime in the same vein that someone dying is shocking to them.

When you are living you are blind to the universe. When you see the universe, you sacrifice living. Both are lost, but the latter is lost and grateful.

There are two things you need to mature - one is to get to a level of cognition where you humbly accept that you are not right on the matter at hand, that you are not in fact god - the second follows on from the first thing, and that is you want to exploit the idiots who are sure they are right, on both sides that is.

Whilst the mob is fighting between themselves, the opportunists eyes are lighting up with dollar signs.

No one falls upwards.

Our life is what we make of it.

The average leader gives promises, the great one gives hope.

The average voter is deluded in the sense that they hire clowns and expect competency.

Unfortunately those that tend to open their mouths are the ones that don't realize how stupid they sound.

You don't side with what is right, but with what doesn't get your executed.

If we punished everyone who has erred, the global economy would collapse.

In the healthy society, people fear each other.

You cannot buy the hunger to be the best.

The educated may be free in a monetary sense, but not from their own biases and prejudices.

What matters when you arrive is not the destination, but who you are as a person.

Honesty is being told what you need to hear, not what you want to hear.

Conduct yourself in society as though they will be writing biographies about you in fifty years time.

Without purpose you have a tendency to blame others for your plight.

The pursuit of happiness is like blowing up bridges - you destroy both others and your own. But the pursuit of meaning may just in fact build bridges, but its not guaranteed.

There are very few ultra successful young people who have a terrific social life.

The true winners in societies battles are the ones you have never heard of laughing all the way to the bank.

Everyone's life is a lie, just a matter of by how much.

Your strategies may be beautiful, but the execution will be off.

They may mourn you today, but you will be forgotten about by tomorrow..

You get to choose your choices, not the consequences.

Everyone knows something, just not as much as they believe.

There is no greater a motivation to attempt something than to be sexually selected because of it.

Sometimes it is disadvantages that are needed for success and not the opposite.

If you want to be ultra successful in life, you best be comfortable that your family will hate you for it, that is if you have one.

Hell is a place where everything is done for you.

What women find attractive is resources. If not resources, then a plan to attain them.

You cannot be anything, only something.

If you asked everyone, they all would have their version of the apocalypse that will occur soon enough and also their solutions to prevent it. Yet, society has shown it goes on.

Fear is the mother of innovation.

Wars prolong themselves because people cannot dare accept they are wrong.

To say you will never throw it all away for nothing is hubris - through out human history millions have done precisely that - to be humble is to say you could.

Everyone, no exceptions, are only good at a few things.

What do you do when nobody is watching? That is what you should do in life.

All these intellectuals do is repackage the same drivel as to what will work to make you find yourself in life. When in truth, what works for one, is poison to another.

Life is incredibly complex and uncertain - what works for one, wont for someone else - billions will die with an uneasy feeling of not having lived the good life - but you can still be grateful for whatever way the dice fell.

All these self-help gurus like to position themselves as wiser than those who came before them. When all they are truly interested in is the dollar.

We are all heading in the same direction - the ground. Now choose.

You have your plans. But life has its own.

The grass always seems greener on the other side, but regardless of choice, we will have regrets either way.

It is simple why most are average - they lack the time to be immense. They spend the first eight hours of the day asleep, the second eight working and the final eight looking after their family.

If you are going to make mistakes, make them when young - youth is forgiven, experience not as much.

What is sad in life is how quickly we get old.

The question isn't what you have done, but can you live with it.

Who society hates says so much about it.

Only a life with purpose is a life worthwhile.

Satisfaction is the desire for what you already have.

You cannot exceed your limits if you don't know what they are.

Don't worry about the future - it is coming regardless.

A man gives a woman resources, a woman gives a man life.

Every intellectual likes to declare their philosophy as gospel.

What is vital for success is the ability to suppress anxiety.

What is muddled looking forwards, is crystal clear looking backwards.

There is a life for everyone, but only a few find out what it is.

It is not a question of can it be done, only one of when it will.

No economic decision benefits all - there are winners and losers alike. The same can be said for advice.

Perpetual motion does exist - its when two idiots debate.

If you cannot stop your enemy, at least make it very difficult for him.

When it comes to creativity, the worse thing you can do isn't not read at all, but to read too much. By doing the latter you just become someone else's thoughts - you stifle your own imagination.

Just because you have no enemies now, doesn't mean it will stay that way in the future.

You get to choose many things in life, but not how others view you.

Without suffering you cannot be better.

You get one as they are, not as you wish them to be.

For those that "know it all" there is no room to actually improve and hence mature.

Don't fool yourself - only a very small minority get to speak the truth.

The shackled have a habit of siding with the insane and not the doctors.

What you should aim for in life is get to stage where you are rich enough to tell the truth. Free speech is but a privilege of the wealthy.

There is nothing wrong with getting old, provided you have maturity to show for it.

It is both unbearable and terrifying for one in the majority to admit they are imprisoned. Thus so few of them do this.

The average Marxist would rather rejoice in their slavery than be alone in their freedom.

Everything in society goes well until it doesn't.

To be grateful one must be friends with solitude as much as other people.

A society is only as good as it is willing to forgive. Once it loses that it descends into brutality.

Democracies don't usually fall in one day.

One should resist the urge to adore those that flatter them the most.

We take stability for granted be it a country or an individual.

When the courts are a joke and the politicians are clowns, the devil then doesn't look so bad.

Time erodes everything, not with violence, but patience. Our legacy is not written in stone, but in dust, waiting for the wind to blow it away.

You cannot reason with someone who wants you killed.

To know what you will regret is the best thing to know, especially when young.

Without realizing it, one is chasing a high every day. That is why so many become alcoholics.

The man that doesn't know where he is from, has no idea where he is going.

You either live all alone, unknown, or you conform.

The child that isn't allowed make mistakes, turns out dysfunctional as an adult.

You cannot reach the future through living in the past.

When you give a voice to every idiot in society, you get what we presently observe.

The danger with wealth is the happiness of those not as fortunate as you. No amount of money can match those that are happier than you.

Those that cannot think well, are prone to letting others think for them.

The opposite to hate in the world isn't love but its acceptance that it is flawed.

There is no healthy level of dirt-famous.

It is a dangerous thing to be too sure.

You should be confident enough not to trust confidence.

The mad are all around us, in the cities, the work places, the suburbs. They are not just confined to the walls of the asylum.

When you win, you are confident, when you lose, overconfident.

The best person to listen to is someone who calls you an idiot.

To adapt smoothly to a sick society is no real indication of personal health. Harmony with a diseased world is not the song of a healthy soul.

None is more deluded than the correct.

To know how to behave in heaven you must learn from the fallen in hell.

The standard ideologue thinks they are saving the world by cancelling those on the opposite side.

You have two choices, be brainwashed by whatever cult you are in, or go alone and think for yourself, but be lonely.

To be on some side, is a terrible side to be on.

Don be so vain as to think that if everyone was just like you, we would live in a utopia. Even if everyone was Jesus, you still have a dysfunctional society.

Knowing you will some day die, gives meaning to what you have.

The perfectionist always thinks about what they lack in life, never about what they have.

It says it all really, that we find it easier to break up and move on from the person we "love" than we do our community.

In order to appreciate your freedom, you have to risk it every once in a while.

Being known means you must take sides. And believe whatever madness each side believes given the age.

What is generally not understood is that we ruin our existence when we are in a good mood.

Those that do not evolve do not do anything with their life. To be the same person at sixty, as you were when you were twenty, means you have wasted forty years of your existence.

We don't see society as is, we see it as we are.

What makes life worth living? To do good in the world.

If you stop learning, you cease living.

Innovation requires imagination, not learning something 20 times so you can write it out in an exam.

In modern society there is no such thing as can't. There is always a price.

We are luckier than those that came before us, but destined to be not as lucky as those that come after us.

Those that promise utopia are the true drug cartels.

God may give good advice, but the devil is a much better marketer.

Ones choices can be explained by the statement: they always choose the dollar ahead of anything else.

Very few know when they are being clichéd.

Rather than accept it is for what it is, we nearly always want society built in our own dreams.

Making money is legit. Making lots of money, not always.

Kill one person and you are a murderer. Kill a million and you are a revolutionary.

It is pointless to demand an apology without offering your hand of forgiveness. Which is what cancel culture precisely does.

If you cannot forgive those that disagree with you, the chances are you are brainwashed on some cult.

What is totalitarian is when the movement demands universal submission to its ideals.

Man would rather explore the dark recesses of the universe than his own soul.

Hopefully you learn to be mature in six months time, not when you only have six months left.

If we actually knew everything about each other, as though we were dirt level famous, we would all shun each other.

Time is your most valuable asset - thus the price of anything is always how much time it costs you.

When you believe another to be perfect, then he will mislead you.

If something is too easy to do, there is not a lot of money in it.

It is dangerous times to live in when the idiot is right and the genius is wrong.

We revel in pointing out the flaws....of other people, but never our own.

We call out complete worshipping, but never our own outrage.

The best time to live was yesterday. The second best time is right now.

The two things that sell the most are gossip and hope.

Today's generation's dreams will be the next generation's nightmares.

The best thing you can do with wisdom is pass it on.

What if this universe is just some insane man's psychosis!

The voter that is deceived, voted for economics, but got a dictator instead.

A tranquil society only exists because of the hard men in the shadows protecting it.

Look at how a society treats its condemned - that tells you everything.

It is up to you to figure it all out.

Being educated and part of the group is no different than being dumb and part of the group. This is what the educated must learn.

Humility is what time teaches us all.

We are all creatures of what we most fear.

To break and not be broken, that is your measurement.

Walking in a big enough circle feels like walking in a straight line. You think you are moving forward, when in reality you are not moving anywhere at all.

Extraordinary rises tend to have extraordinary falls.

If you are emotional, like the degenerate gambler, you cannot make honest decisions in life. You should never make choices when you are either extremely angry, or worse, extremely happy.

Without suffering and sacrifice, there is nothing to be won in life.

Consumerism is buying things you don't need, with money you don't have, to impress people you wouldn't even care about if they dropped dead right now.

We all think we are not as stupid as those that contradict us.

If you live for the thrill of when the dice fall your way, then you must accept that they might not.

One wants to win the debate, not have the debate.

In the court of public opinion, no one can win.

One cannot serve two masters.

Most humans are too busy to see the end coming.

There is no opportunity without its burden.

Every child dreams of a system of total freedom. This is what lights up their brains as though they have tried heroin for the first time. But they are disappointed when old, as they discover there is no such thing.

Freedom for the liberal is oppression for the conservative and vice versa.

Life can only be lived, not relived. So you best proceed with an optimistic caution.

Few realize just how easy it can go wrong in life. Everyone thinks themselves as the news anchor and never the story.

Know your limits and then soar past them.

Take what you have accomplished and then think of all you could have accomplished had you been alone.

It says so much about you as a person, and not in a good way, that you want those on the other side ruined.

The difference between us isn't lack of mistakes, but whether we learn from them.

The world is full of people who are certain and not many that want to understand.

What one calls living is actually dying.

What the charlatans do is make the situation seem helpless and then they swoop in to provide the hope.

It is a most awful thing, to be on the side of the majority.

You don't want to live in a utopia. What happens if you make a mistake in a utopian society, one where no mistakes are supposed to be made? I will tell you what happens - you get carted off to some concentration camp for thirty years - you and your whole family.

The average socialist would rather persist in delusion than admit they are shackled by those on their side.

The rule is simple: if we are in debt, we side with our creditors. Therefore every society needs its ostentatious class to point out the insanity of the age.

You will find it is easy to get out of bed in the morning when you have something to live for.

Turning off money to the greedy is like turning off heroin to the addict.

What becomes of society when it is the sane that are delusional! As Jiddu remarked, it is no measure of health to be well adjusted to a profoundly sick society.

Perhaps one only despises the minorities because they fear being labelled as one.

You should only swing at pitches you know you can hit.

When you wrap deception up as patriotism, people tend to be misled.

If you are going to devote forty years of your life to something, you best not do it for free.

It is most difficult for you to accept, let alone understand, that perhaps you are not right.

When you attack the symptoms with a sledge hammer, you ignore the disease.

What gives hope, often causes pain.

What Karl Marx demonstrated is that you can come up with diabolical nonsense, and it is not a question of whether someone will believe it, more so of how many actually will.

There is a simple test of ones wisdom - can they forgive? If you take these idiot liberals and stupid conservatives, they cannot forgive the other sides indiscretions.

The sun is dying, so that we live - be grateful in life.

Man prefers to move forward, but he should from time to time look back.

If you treat life like a popularity contest, you may be rich, but unhappy.

Perfection is not attainable in life, but when you go after it, you catch excellence.

Life is short. There is no time for doubts and second guessing. There is only time for choices.

In the authoritarian regime, the people bow to the dictator. In the democratic society, the people bow to each other.

It is foolish to sacrifice the good life for a perfect one.

Society is flawed - its institutions, its infrastructure and most importantly its inhabitants. Yet if you asked anyone, they expect utopia. They think there should be no crime and no mistakes. This is what I call the Utopian Fallacy. No matter the policy or direction or system, there is no utopia - this is why so many are disappointed a month after the election.

The human spirit cannot be broken but only contained.

Those that think the whole world is against them are usually found in the psychiatric hospitals, unless they are a whole nation. A delusion held by one person is an illness - one held by a country is an ideology.

Society is very diverse and not always in your favour. How stupid and cruel must you be to not be able to accept this diversity!

If you believe the politicians promises come election day, its time to step back.

I fear heaven more than hell, for at least in hell everyone is equal.

You don't know the value of food, unless you haven't eaten in two weeks.

The difference between impossible and inevitable is measured in persistence.

People take sides and then spend the rest of their lives seeking validation for their views.

Nazi Germany was a very disciplined society and we saw what happened to those that did not meet its standards.

The best and only time you can live is when you are alive.

The outraged don't see what is good with society and the well off don't know what's at stake.

Miss-information to one is gods scripture to another.

If economics was a bookies, most of us would be degenerate gambling addicts without a cent to our name.

When the beast is defeated, then the defeater becomes the monster.

The tragic thing about tragedy is that it must occur before we change things.

Democratic institutions are authoritarian, at least their own subdued version of it. But instead of the elites ruling us, it is our friends and neighbours and work colleagues.

Men only receive gratitude at their funeral.

Society is in a continuous state of evolution - the one who thrives is the one that adapts this change best.

Failure is either the end of it all or the beginning of something better.

You don't get to live your life without both angering and disappointing someone along the way.

The danger with fame is that you love it.

The way to make money is to say humanity is in "danger" and then provide the "solutions" to this danger. Solutions that just so happen to line your pockets.

If we were immortal, there would be no such thing as true love.

Opinion never doubts his delusion.

We are all going to die - no one escapes. Therefore to live means to live for something.

You are either disciplined in life or you are regretful.

Whilst you are busy making plans, the gods are hedging their bets.

Sometimes you can try everything and there are no solutions. Sometimes you have to accept defeat.

It isn't a good thing to respect your shackler.

Most people only dream of the result, not the execution. This is why so few achieve greatness in life.

Those that are immune from the labels of being shunned, cause the most trouble in society.

What do a degenerate gambling addict, a woman on her wedding day and a Liverpool FC fan all share in common? They are all chasing the dopamine high.

No matter how well you do your due diligence, you still only get perspective on the topic at hand, and never the truth, as there is no such thing. But what is labelled as fact in society is only what is most popular at the time.

The majority has no experience in being a politician, yet most believe they would do a better job of running the country than those in office presently.

The problem with going too deep in life is you dig too much and cannot get out.

The man that tries not to pay a price, pays the gravest price of all, an unfulfilled life.

Changing the world changes the crime, it doesn't get rid of it.

You can be wealthy but feel poor if those you compare yourself to are doing better than you.

Maturity is something that cannot be bought.

If you take sides, you are not as smart as you think you are.

By focusing on what you lack in life, you ignore all you are blessed with.

There is a negative label for everything we don't agree with.

Any man that can "see" into the future is understandably not to be trusted.

The average government overestimates what they can do and underestimates what they actually do.

The situation shapes the leader far more than the other way around.

The years of uncertainty and stress are possibly the ones in which you most live.

Sometimes life doesn't go your way. But sometimes it does and that is why you do it.

You cannot have rights for who you choose. It must be rights for everyone. As it is with freedom.

The what-is-wrong-with-you industry is worth billions. The what-is-right-with-you industry went bankrupt.

We are guilty of believing we have years left. Is it good luck or bad luck to know you only have months left?

If you asked anyone they would say we are living in both the best and worst times ever.

The truth doesn't matter on occasion. What matters is what the masses believe.

Fundamental issues require fundamental solutions.

We live in a world where it is not whether you are right, but whether you have an audience.

It is a question of what price you are willing to pay - a heavy or a hurtful one.

The good intellectuals provide the solutions - the great ones provide the problems and then the solutions.

The road from dirt to dominance is not straight nor smooth.

As long as there is demand for the illicit, no war waged on it is winnable.

An intellectual is someone who puts glitter on garbage and calls it gold.

It is easy to be generous in life, with other peoples money.

To be good in such an uncertain world is the highest honour.

The only thing worse than the capitalists is the capitalists masquerading as socialists.

For the last thousand years the intellectuals have been sounding the alarm and yet society persevered, as it always will.

The best leaders take what is functional and leave it be - the worst ones take what is functional and replace it with what feels better.

Those that always want more in life suffer as much as those who have nothing at all.

Failure is either the end or it is a privilege.

The time to fail is when you are young.

The difference between talent and genius, is anyone can be talented.

If you are misunderstood, you are going places.

The talented want to be known as a genius - the genius just wants to be alone.

It is easier to run away from the mirror than stare into it.

Two thirds of ones job is looking busy.

The road to heaven takes a sharp detour through hell.

If everyone treats themselves as a prima donna, then we end up all alone.

When one has lived all their lives in heaven, understandably they expect the same standards in hell.

If you want to be different, if not superior to others, you must be cognizant of your own ignorance.

Supply one with food, warmth and shelter, and they will believe whatever you say. But give them a dopamine hit, and they will murder for you.

It is society's shame that says so much about it.

Trust takes decades to gain and moments to lose.

The why it happened is as interesting as its how. To prevent same tragedy happening again, its why and how must both be understood.

Dystopia is when you want your society to be as you think it should be.

If wealth can move, he will, when he is danger of losing himself.

The closer you get to the truth, the stranger things become.

Talk is free. Action costs money.

If you give a child everything they want, they don't get grateful, but greedy.

There is always funds to conquer foreigners, but never any to look after your own.

If only we could handle the boredom, we could be immortal with happiness.

The problem with utopia in heaven is people expect it on Earth.

A friend to all is not a friend to himself.

One should make a habit of not letting their political allegiance cloud their judgment.

Even the lord of hell has regrets.

Those that you adore are not perfect, much like you are not.

The get rich quick mantra is actually the get scammed quick mantra.

We all have to earn money, unless you are sitting on some remote island in the middle of nowhere.

Control the language and you control the debate.

When the movements gain traction, the institutions adapt.

Its not a healthy society, when critics are labelled enemies of progress.

One only gains rights at the expense of someone else's.

The roads of any prosperous country are paved with trust, not gold.

When societies pendulum swings forward, it seldom swings back the same amount.

Stagnation is the fertile ground of innovation.

There is no heaven and certainly no heaven of utopia.

Come every democratic election, one votes for a saviour and gets an accountant.

We tend to obsess about what we lack in life. The poor, money. The rich, more.

Eventually we reach an age, where looking back on what we once had is always more appetising than looking forward to what we have left.

Society is always a question of what system is best, not what is perfect.

For a country to grow economically, it needs hopes and dreams.

We are all in this together, except for the person saying it.

It is socialism for the 1% and capitalism for the rest of us.

Utopia is privatised and dystopia is socialized.

Even empty space in the universe will get old and vanish.

You cannot fix the system, just make it better.

If you want to make millions, target children.

The only tyranny worse than the invading dictator is when its one of our own.

Calling some of these communist dictators monsters is offensive to monsters.

Mao's gift to the world was to show just how brutal dreams can be.

Society is as it is - it is not as you are. Accept this.

Quite often our most grandiose exaggerations never happen.

Every debate has its "expert" and its idiot. Both people in the debate consider themselves the expert and the other the idiot.

Those that expect utopia, are always shocked with what they actually get.

Sacrifice will save you.

If only you knew how much abuse and violence is necessary for one in the west to live a good life.

A countries prosperity depends on good faith. Loss of belief is the one debt that cannot be paid back - trust cannot be printed.

All empires die on indifference.

You can forgive the young delusional communists - they are children. But to spend your whole life a Marxist means you never grew up.

To feel others pain is to know you are human.

Rather than admonish the disparity in society, you should accept it.

There is no best without its worst - in fact you often only have the best because of the worst.

It is a confusing thing for one to be trapped in, when the hand that punishes is the same hand that rewards.

There is much to be learned from things you despise.

When you make yourself out to be a victim every day, then it is no surprise that you consider yourself unhappy.

If you have no interest in labels, they will then have an interest in you.

One flaw of humans is that we expect utopia. You fully believe that there should be no criminals in society - which we are disappointed each day by. Or when we vote for a politician, we expect him to be perfect, when he lets us down. But you have to begin to accept that society is fundamentally flawed.

The most authoritarian society would be one in which everyone is perfect.

Man worships the god that is dopamine.

Those that cannot forgive, are the easiest to manipulate through their yearning to adore. If you are perpetually outraged, you are by the same token easily swept away by the narcissists that beguile you.

We are all playing a game of chess, our better self against our worst.

God asks questions of man, but likewise does man of god.

It is the hidden curriculum that is the best teacher of children.

Those taught to lead the world, don't know how to live within it.

It is opportunity and not just wealth that the rich pass down to their heirs.

Wealth can disappear in a instant - but what endures is belonging.

Power protects itself. It always has and always will.

There is no money to be made from pointing out all that is right about someone.

The propaganda from the Marxist doctrine is that we live in a society whereby everyone should win. This is false.

If you expect everyone to be perfect in life, you will spend it disappointed.

It is a privilege to recognize how ignorant you are.

Some people are the prize - most people are the wrapping paper.

In order for society to prosper it needs 95% of the population to be ignorant.

Regret is the most esteemed teacher man has.

It is a lot harder to turn off surveillance once it has been turned on.

The capitalists are terrible, but those you want to replace them with, equally so.

For the monster, no amount of power will suffice.

Promises are cheap when vying for the throne.

The more known you are, the more predictable you are.

Ambition is great unless it remains absolute.

It is most difficult to attain maturity if you must work 12 hours a day.

The game we call life is not played on hypotheticals, but on choices.

Does god play dice with the universe! I know that man does.

If you think you have it tough in life, compare yourself to someone less fortunate.

The worst never happens, but neither does the best.

The swindlers tell their audience what they most want to hear.

Every time is the most interesting of times.

A government that gives everyone everything, can with the snap of fingers take it all away.

The most clichéd thing in life is to be resentful of those more popular than you.

The geniuses are often found in the psychiatric hospitals because the idiots drive them insane, literally.

You can be poor and popular, or the opposite.

If they lie to please you, what will they be capable of when you are no longer in favour?

Most of those that complain expect the universe to be perfect.

The only time you should be irresponsible is when you are paid to be - I guess that explains politics.

Society always has its lowest - if it wasn't the sex offenders it would be someone else.

It is quite ironic in that it is usually the sinners that cannot forgive the fallen.

Everyone dreams of being the emperor, but not everyone dreams of being a good one. With power comes responsibility.

If you expect everyone you interact with to be perfect, you will die alone.

Sometimes the winning move is to do nothing.

It is most difficult for one, such is their ego, to accept they are an idiot.

The stupid move is to try and make the fools be as you are. The smart move is to let them be and make a fortune off them. And there are plenty of them in the world.

Good intentions by one only means appalling suffering for someone else.

The flawed of society don't see a world of opportunity, but one that needs fixing, as though they have the solutions.

It is not about what is actually right and what is actually wrong, it is what agrees with your viewpoint - you take that to be the truth. In reality if politics were a physics theory it would be quantum mechanics, where the truth is muddled and uncertain.

True intelligence isn't to know you are right, but to simultaneously know you are both right and wrong. What is true for you is anarchy to someone else.

When a service is free, you are the product.

The intelligent liberals see problems as the end of society. The intelligent conservatives see the same problems as a challenge, something to get out of bed for in the morning.

The means to garner a cult like following is to provide the problem and then the solution to it, both of which are fairy tales.

Every movement has its Gestapo for those that question it.

No matter how wise you are, you are never wise enough.

A society of sheep tends to be ruled by a wolf.

You don't actually have to be very good at your job, you just have to convince the right people that you are.

When you are perpetually obsessed with the life the 1% possess, you do yourself no favours.

Everyone young person likes to think that they are special and different, that they wont fail, that destiny is on their side, yet they are fated to discover time judges us all fairly.

When a population is starving, it is then that they will believe anything.

Hatred left unopposed destroys itself.

Approval is what sustains the-minority-hating-majority - they don't earn near as much money by being in the majority but at least they all like each other.

The extremists cannot forgive, regardless of political affiliation.

If you have bills to be paid, you are not going to be a thinking person.

One who hedges the money on greed, is often rewarded, such is society.

Behind that shiny apple you purchase in the supermarket, is a tragic tale of abuse.

The only person both the liberals and conservatives despise more than each other is the individual that doesn't take sides.

We either die young or of regret, but never the two together.

Whatever makes a tonne of money will exist, legal or not.

If you want to know why something is so popular, look at the money, not the statistics.

We have no idea how it all ends, but we have a pretty good idea where it leads.

If you have no interest in labels, they will have an interest in you.

It is hard to be grateful in an uncertain world.

A man that cannot handle stress, is most unattractive to the opposite sex.

Conduct yourself in life as though you will be dirt-famous in forty years time.

Life is only ever finding what you are willing to suffer for and then enduring it.

God has a terrible habit of giving wealth to those that know not how to live with it.

What starts in bliss ends amiss.

Nothing is as cruel as tradition.

Paranoia is most dangerous to an individual and to society on the whole.

You want to get to a position in life where you don't have to take sides.

Freedom of speech is an illusion - we say what our employers pay us to say. It is only the ultra rich that can avail of the freedom of speech mantra.

The ideologue just cannot fathom why everyone in the world doesn't think like them, as though the resultant society would be perfect.

No matter what good you do, some labels follow you for the rest of your life, in particular sex crime ones. This plays a powerful role in society - make the most stigmatized deviants be sex offenders, to prevent others from becoming them. In ways the stigmatization saves one.

Humanity will be ended by something it has never dreamt of.

When you solve one problem in society, your focus just changes to a different one.

Easy today means harder tomorrow - so you can guess what hard today means for tomorrow!

If it makes you anxious, its probably not worth your time.

The most intelligent of society will either prolong humanity, or if their ambitions cloud them, end it.

Success takes a lot of time alone. If you are married with kids and working day to day, you cannot attain it, unless you are incredibly lucky. What do Vincent Van Gogh and Diane Warren both share in common? Or Isaac Newton and Emily Dickenson? All four never married - that is why they are remembered.

Have you ever noticed that whenever anyone does something we disagree with, we want them punished.

Most people would be out of a job if they told the truth.

If you want to know what the system thinks of excessive wealth, look at the unfortunate it gives it to.

We have our appearances and then we have our secrets.

When they start suggesting, this is what you do to get it right in society, that's when you stop listening.

Success is iteration, curiosity and lots of solitude.

What one wants more than success, fame, wealth, is acceptance.

Irony between the present and past is a rarely recognized thing.

If you make them rich, they wont care how you do it.

The trick to building an audience isn't to provide solutions but attribute blame. Solutions are complex and time consuming - blame is easily understood.

It doesn't matter what we do in life, come our hour, we will regret not having done more.

The best thing about wealth is not having to worry about tomorrow. But this is taken for granted by the rich.

Angry is the man who doesn't get his dopamine fix, be he a gambler or football fan.

Everyone is shocked at the crime of the day, as though crime should not exist.

You think you have the solutions, so did I when I was younger, but I assure you that you don't - this is what you must learn and you cannot do it as part of the cult.

The rich could write a book as to why they are unhappy, but it probably wont sell too much.

To be remembered is often the worst punishment.

The only thing worse than growing old is being denied the opportunity to do so.

When one is emotional, they cannot think straight.

Every year has its top ten selling self-help books, all of which don't make any difference to the readers lives.

The clash between poverty and prosperity is never a nice one.

If you don't learn the easy way, then you learn the tragic way.

We are all children of the same sun.

Even if you imprisoned everyone in solitary confinement, you still wouldn't solve society's problems.

It's when we are in a good mood that we destroy our lives - no degenerate gambler ever thinks he will lose.

The rebel today is often a saint in the future.

Forgiveness works both ways - if you don't give it, don't expect it. This is what separates a good judge from those that point their fingers.

If it makes an already difficult life more difficult, it is not worth it.

Those that cannot accept society for what it is, are always in a disappointed mood.

Impossible standards and expectations do not have the outcome you dream of.

Everyone is sure they are correct in the same vein the lotto player is convinced he will win. A simple stroll into a betting shop shows belief counts for nothing.

If a perfect childhood is expected, a dysfunctional adulthood is the outcome.

To the conservatives, their obsession is getting rid of the immigrants. That is what they think will yield utopia. Then the liberals want to get rid of the conservatives, they think that will yield utopia. Both are incorrect - they would just find other problems to obsess over if their retrospective visions came true. All the while, people who you have never even heard of, profit immensely out of this proxy war - they are the truly wise ones of society.

The narcissism of humans is such that we all want to be the one that does it, even if it kills us all.

Sometimes you do nothing wrong and still fail.

There is so much to be understood, but so little time to do so.

I know you don't understand it, but the solutions to crime are much more complicated than "building more prisons." If the philosophy is to increase the number of penitentiary's in society, then the moral and law-abiding often end up in them.

The highly intelligent stand on the podiums, the idiots on the streets.

Manchester United fans may call it their club, but it is not they who get paid. A similar reasoning can be applied to a country and its people.

Hating the hated is not good for your soul.

Every age has its civilization enders, none of which actually happen.

Most of our terrible decisions are not committed in a sombre mood.

It says more about you as a person, expecting the world to be perfect, than it does of the world itself.

In our search for greatness, we often find loneliness.

The more we learn, the more we learn that we don't know.

The fools are black and white - there is no grey area, no understanding.

Your past is what happened to you - your future is what you do with what happened to you - your present is your understanding of this.

Greed is a terrible cancer.

The smart person isn't he who has power, but the one in the shadows pulling the strings of the powerful.

If you go by the mantra that everything should be perfect, then all the institutions are failing you. The police, the lawyers, the judges, the prison wardens etc.

The mob are akin to the vultures circling around the fallen.

The thought that this pristine utopia is not feasible is like kryptonite to the average Marxist, to such an extent that they just ignore it all together.

To overthink kills your happiness.

Karl Marx's popularity was based and still is based on this utopia he said was possible. For the last 150 years every con-artist intellectual has mimicked his mentality.

What is repeated enough becomes "the truth." This is what the intellectuals understand.

One would rather not know and express an opinion, than admit that they don't know.

The future depends not on what we discover but how we choose to use it.

Most people don't mind authoritarianism so long as others are the target.

If the rise is utopian, the decline will be dystopian.

What the past teaches is to not expect a perfect future.

A country must always fear itself as much as the enemy.

Everyone likes to think of themselves as smarter than the opposition, but not as smart as those they adore. This is a most dangerous level of thinking, they kind that gets one taken advantage of.

Sometimes I fall into hubris and think I am a genius when I see almost everyday the idiot conservatives and liberals attacking each other over who is right. And they are both convinced with the upmost conviction, like the insane in a psychiatric hospital, that they just know the truth of all matters.

It is crazy to see highly intelligent people who believe they have it all figured out. Thus it takes more than intelligence to be intelligent.

We will gladly betray ourselves just to be approved by people we don't care about.

Those that contradict our ideals are never considered good enough.

The public will always vote for those that "appear" sincere.

If growth is the motivation, eventually you grow into extinction.

To stay silent is to be on both sides and also neither of them.

When you uncover the truth, expect to be attacked.

If only Thomas Sowell was as popular with our youth as Karl Marx is.

When you hate someone, you are blind to all the good in them. When you adore someone, you are ripe for manipulation on you by them.

In creating a paradise for the mind, you damage the soul.

If you cannot handle the loneliness, you will be taken advantage by what suppresses it.

The equation is simple - if they have the blueprint for utopia in society, they are charlatans.

It all ends bad for everyone alive, but that is not an excuse to take risks.

Everyone has a voice now in a society where 99% should stay silent.

In blaming society, we avoid blaming ourselves.

We say the system is broken, but society is just a reflection of us.

We want honesty but reward those that don't tell the truth.

We could write a book on how to become happy, but nowhere in this said book is a chapter on our own personality and biases. What works for one, doesn't work for another.

You get a society as is, not as you want it to be.

We are all gamblers, chasing the high of winning - if it isn't the horses or alcohol, it's idealism.

It is not only about getting there, but also about staying there.

Fame always opens up a can worms called your mistakes, mistakes you thought you had left behind.

It is a terrible thing when the inmates start treating the consultant psychiatrists and that is communism in a nutshell.

In society there is some success and lots of suffering - get used to it. There is no ATM in heaven, but there might be in hell

The impressionable get the intellectuals they deserve.

Change is best privilege of the democratic process.

Man either adores or loathes, when everyone is something in between. One must be willing to understand their enemies and call out their heroes.

What Elon Musk and Noam Chomsky both share in common is that they both believe that if you just did it their way, utopia is possible. But even if you did, you just create different problems. Trade-offs, trade-offs, trade-offs.

If everything went to plan we would have no reason to get out of bed in the morning.

The law is perfect but it is right.

We all have our regrets and secrets, but we are not all famous.

If being seen by your neighbour results in you acknowledging him or her, what else does being seen by a human do to your mind?

If you want to be a success, seek the truth of things.

Everyone's great tragedy is that they fail to mature.

The stupid are incapable of letting their disgust cloud their judgement.

There are so many who question the executioner, but hide it, out of fear for the turning screw.

There is no polite way to tell someone they are highly impressionable.

Men weaponize money - women weaponize sex.

Niall owns a Manchester United forum on the internet. Niall is smart, because Niall just sits back and lets all the Manchester United fans on the said forum get into arguments over what Manchester United should do to win. Niall is smart - the users on the forum are stupid. Be like Niall in life.

Everyone expects everyone else to be as "perfect" as they are.

You really are going places when both the liberals and the conservatives resent you.

Is one stupid or is it the language available to them makes them look stupid?

There is no more a greater way of demonstrating your naivete than by speaking your opinion.

The socialist is an expert at not knowing anything.

It is amazing to those that are some how insulted, that their response to this is to ship the person East. This is Stalin's mentality - "you have some how offended me, thus cannot be forgiven and must be punished." The world isn't meant to be perfect - in fact it functions because it is not. If justice was left to the victim, we would all be hanged.

The best validation is self-validation

None is more delusional than the certain.

The divine sometimes punish harder than the demons.

When the end comes, it will astonish us.

The capitalist loves talking in clichés but is only interested in one cliché and that is profit.

The mob adores you if you are as foolish as them.

If you excel at something, you never do it for free.

One may get away with it in life, but the history books don't lie.

Even if you were the wealthiest person that ever existed or will exist, you still cannot buy time.

Life is what you choose to be.

Life is such that we worry about everything other than dying, until we are dying, in which case we are set free from anxiety.

The neighbours love you if you suffer just as much as they do.

Life often gets in the way of love.

You will discover some day, that life is as much what you can live with, as much as what you live for.

Maturity is a repetitive process of discovering you are wrong.

Your worst fears are seldom realized, but neither are your most grandiose dreams.

Everyone could write a bestseller on their tragedy in their life.

The dreamers often get the brutal they never anticipate.

The second best thing you can do to the mob is educate them - the best thing however you can do is profit off them.

The many who overuse cliches day to day, are ripe for manipulation by the few. Those with limited knowledge are corrupted by the creative.

You are entitled to your opinion, but you must accept that it could be wrong.

Choice is humanities deadliest foe.

The gods are welcome in hell, but the sinners are always forbidden from heaven.

If you teach everyone that you win no matter what, you get anarchy.

Rights granted for one, always means the erosion of rights for someone else.

Every empire eventually only exists in history books.

Innovation dies under control.

Every empire believes they are different and that the rules don't apply to them - everyone of them throughout history has become a cautionary tale.

Debt is a most terrible enemy who has a habit of always winning.

If your motivation is profit, at least don't make it obvious.

The way to make money in society is to tell the mob the end is coming and that you are the saviour.

The rebels of society tend to upset a lot of people.

Even if you took all the narcotics away, you would not get rid of the drug addicts.

Those that create hell tend to get hell.

Countries obsess over staying ahead of the enemy, but what if the enemy is yourself?

Either your past catches up with you or death does.

There are numerous incorrect ways to live but no right way.

If capitalism is an unequally shared luxury, socialism is an equally shared misery.

The measure of wisdom is how willing one is to forgive.

Whatever choice you make, you don't not get to lose friends - every decision for one thing is a decision against something else.

Time is most unkind enemy. And he takes no prisoners.

One is at the mercy of the vocabulary available to them. If their language is hyperbolic, they will come across as dumb.

Most that say they want their equality don't know what they actually want.

A society often goes into the past through its dreams.

Excessive bullishness in the good times only leads to lots of employment for undertakers in the bad times.

If man knows his limits, he knows enough.

The universe is indifferent and unforgiving.

You can only go so far and then Rome falls.

When all you see is the money, it blinds you from seeing anything else.

You have your plans but life has its own.

When one loses their perseverance, they lose everything.

Be if anything an eternal hunter of the impossible.

The things out of our reach are the most irresistible mysteries of all.

One must be cognizant of being propagandized.

Those that want freedom must thereby accept what they give birth to.

It is more comforting for the socialist to persist in delusion than admit perhaps they are the one that is delusional.

If you made society perfect, you wouldn't have one.

What ends with a grimace often started with a smile. So many relationships are indicative of this.

So you have had a bump or two on the road - everyone in life has.

Don't destroy someone's home and then ask why they turned their guns on you.

What works for one, is detrimental to others, such is society. The same risk that makes one look like a genius, bankrupts another.

If I could pick one thing that conveys wisdom in society, it is that one doesn't have the solutions for everyone and everything. What they have is a philosophy or product that will only benefit a certain percentage of society, but never a 100%. But there is no wealth to be amassed from being uncertain, which is why most people try to appear certain, as humility seldom sells well.

Most don't even know what to love or hate, until they are told.

Society is in a perpetual process of improving.

Problems in society are real, but their solutions not as much.

It is not the politicians running the country but the markets. And every politician is at the mercy of them.

If you go out to be a saint, you must accept that some will call you a sinner.

You get the world you have, not what you want.

It is astonishing what you can get people to do, just by smiling at them.

Men and women will never be equal, even if they were.

To hate one is the most effective means of controlling everyone else.

Everyone grows old. Not everyone grows up.

The equation for genius is simple - if they can speak very well, they are not very intelligent. Hence the field of politics.

Interacting with others, whilst good for the mind, distracts use from the universe.

It is very hard to be wise when you don't have time to be - thus one is at the mercy of their personality.

It is much easier to be humble in hell than in heaven.

If you asked a thousand people, they would each give a different reason for why people are unhappy and also the means to overcome it.

We try to reason with others, but never apply it to ourselves. It is always someone else's fault in life.

We could have it easy, and just live all alone on some remote island in the south Pacific, safe from everyone, except our own conscience.

We are seldom grateful for being someone else's why in life.

Mankind does not get the world he wants, but cruelly what he deserves.

If you are going down the route of punishing everyone who doesn't fit your idea of perfection, the whole world would be hanged. If you want to mature you have to accept that people behave irrationally with respect to your values.

The problem for both sides of the political divide is that both are convinced they are right.

One is astonished everyday that everyone isn't as splendid as them.

The only way to alleviate the brutality of crime is through the brutality of perfection.

Paradoxically and it is not well understood by the average joe, there is more freedoms in the flawed society than there is in the utopian one.

Tragically it takes years for children from decent families to realize just how good they had it when young, that is it is most difficult for them to understand that they were their parents why.

Between two inmates in the asylum, which one is Jesus? That is the political divide in a nutshell.

Men are thinking about the bedroom when they select a woman - women are thinking about the community when they select a man.

To set millions free, millions more must suffer.

That your perspective is correct, is the easiest delusion to fall victim of.

It is futile to coach the body without coaching the mind.

The problem isn't being misled by your own heart, but never choosing to follow it in the first place.

If given the option to fail, unfortunately most will avail of it, be it a business or a relationship.

Until you learn to shut up, you have not learned much at all.

Paradoxically the reason one is not a criminal is because others are. In order for one to recognize what is good in life, they must know what is bad. They are not born moral, they must learn it. Deviance, although horrible, is necessary.

Those that live the life of their dreams often die alone.

Some people should think harder before they think at all.

If you were really smart, you'd take your ego and turn it into money. But you are not really smart - instead you are an idiot that thinks he is smart. What is most difficult for one is to be self-aware of their own ignorance.

The surest way to be miserable is to expect everything to be perfect.

No matter your accomplishments in life, no one will know who you are in a thousand years - that is why it is better to love than anything else.

Ones convictions in life are either unwavering or can be bought cheaply.

The intellectual divides his followers into to two groups - those that are stupid and those that are some what stupider.

Some geniuses start with a dream, others with a reality. My vote is on the one who dreams.

One problem with the world is the billions immune from feeling shame.

Even the emptiest of towns has its secrets.

Be most careful as to who you march for, as opposed to what you march against.

It is not what is illegal, but what is stigmatized, that dictates people.

A society enters tyranny through more brutal punishment.

What every man and woman finds out eventually, is that women are forgiven, men are not.

We hate ourselves when we do deals with the devil. And yet humanity as a species still does the deal.

The dream of utopia is what all brutal dictators share in common.

Economies run on optimism. Perhaps they are destroyed by optimism too.

It is from great failure that you learn greatly.

What opens one door closes another.

The best way to not worry about the world, is to worry about work.

Some day, and its a certainty, you will wish you were never known.

True wisdom is to accept that society is flawed, as much as the dream of utopia is.

Your first eight hours of the day is spent asleep - the second eight is spent working - and the final eight is spent with your family. That is why you are average. To really succeed you must spend a lot of time thinking, which you cannot do if you are asleep, working or tending to your family.

A society in which one cannot err, is one you don't want to be a part of.

All success begins with failure - there is no Van Gogh the genius without Van Gogh the amateur.

A comfortable lie only prolongs your suffering.

To mature one must shed their skin multiple times in life.

Few men can escape their childhood.

Not everyone is capable of reaching the stars, but we are of humanities worst crimes.

You are not very intelligent if you don't realize how ignorant you are.

One will most likely face a situation in life where they hope the person dishing out the justice is reasonable.

Is mankind fated to discover that The Matrix is a documentary and not a film!

With power comes responsibility.

It is when we are in a good mood that we are most likely to betray ourselves.

The greatest feeling no doubt is being your best after your worst.

If you cannot play life with pain, you cannot play the game.

If you give credit to others you will get far in life.

The only thing worse than been taken advantage of, is being taken advantage of with a smile on your face.

When either side has a total monopoly on power, you get a brutal dictatorship, not the utopia so many dream of.

The gods don't live in the real world as the sufferer - that is why they are out of touch.

When the gods get it wrong, its the mere mortals that pay.

A tamed wolf is fed, but he was born to hunt.

The concept of happiness to the narcissist that eats three meals a day is to eat four meals a day. They always focus on what they lack, never what they have.

It is most difficult not to be stupid and easily misled.

Those that complain about the good not being good enough have no insight to how bad the bad can be.

There is much more insane living among us than there are in the asylum.

One is never as dumb nor as smart as they think they are.

You would be surprized at what you are capable of when you have not eaten in three days.

The society that takes what is functional and replaces it with perfection, gets neither.

Fame is the worst thing about fame.

Often you get to choose your success but never your tragedy.

Those that cannot forgive cannot mature.

Every single politician that has existed since the dawn of politics in human societies has been hated. So maybe its not the politician, but the mob mentality.

When justice is left to the fools you get a dystopia.

Sometimes you must concede today to be free tomorrow.

If only we could see our own death, just to realize how insignificant we are.

The average person has an answer for everything, even things they know nothing about. If you asked them how to deal with an asteroid heading for earth, they could give you a detailed solution as to what should be done, even when their knowledge of asteroids only comes from watching Hollywood movies.

Society is broken and there is no fix, despite what the intellectuals suggest.

If you take two people arguing, the assumption behind both of their arguments is that if you just did it their way, it would solve the problem at hand. In reality you could do it your way, my way, gods way, you just get different problems.

If you are really mature and smart, you profit financially from the division between two groups.

People expect to live in a utopia - that is the dilemma any politician faces.

If you surround yourself with idiots, its not difficult to fall into the trap of hubris.

Sometimes it is better to be bored than be anything else.

There is no death, just new beginnings.

The more a society descends into madness, the more it will resent those that speak the truth.

How many times in history has the young dictator said he wants to rescue society?

Complexity does not always equal success.

The truth lies in controversy.

The best side to be on in society is neither side. But you could also argue that it is also the worst.

A smile can lie, a frown, never.

The mob wants success and they want it yesterday.

The price for the mob adoring you is they can turn on you.

One is seldom open to admitting how shackled they are in society.

In modern society one is so busy they don't even have time to worry.

You are at the mercy of those you call your friends.

The lucky thing for politicians is the average voter is as thick as a bowl of oatmeal.

The poor don't understand why the wealthy don't share their cut as much as the wealthy don't understand why the poor turn to crime.

If you possess a mindset of outrage, you will never run out of things to be angry with, such is the enormity of the world.

The mob will always believe he or she who says what they want them to say.

The outrage mob is not a healthy group to be part of.

A man seldom marries his equal.

What is most difficult for one is to swim against the current.

An idiot that recognises he is one, is infinitely wiser than one that doesn't.

Life begins with a single breath and so it must end by it too.

If we wanted a society of true peace, everyone would have to be imprisoned.

If you don't fear being labelled, you will be.

When you surround yourself with fools it is not hard to think you are a genius.

For the lonely, he who gives attention is revered like a god.

The fool takes his opinion to be that of the world. That the billions alive could think differently from him, escapes him.

When you are so busy in life, you don't have time to recognize that you are an idiot.

Those that cannot forgive are not fit to lead.

One is rarely capable of their genius, but they are of their cruelty, both of which they are not cognizant of. They think they can be a success but never a dictator.

To the delusional it is always others that are insane.

It is not a question of who knows everything, no one does, but rather who wishes to know more.

When both the liberals and conservatives hate you, you really must be a monster.

Without the stupid we would have no need for news agencies.

We use adjectives for those we do like and we tend to overuse the nouns for those we don't like.

Certainty is a bitter blow to our understanding of anything.

The truth often sounds like madness to those that are mad.

Revenge unfortunately often clouds even the smartest peoples judgement.

We are all idiots - it's merely a question of who is the most mature idiot among us.

Not everyone has their own story of success, but they do of tragedy.

Some things in society just cannot be fixed. That doesn't mean society has failed.

To subscribe to the cult means eventually you will have to agree with things you don't agree with.

If they are not open to having their opinion changed, they are not worth your time.

The criticism of capitalism is always "if you did it my way, everything would be perfect." Which is delusion. Such people fall into the easy trap that everything should be perfect - no crime, no poverty, no inequality etc. This is impossible. At best we get a functional yet flawed society.

A short life as a heroin addict is better than one day of pain - that is why so many become addicted.

By expecting everything to be perfect in society, you take the good for granted.

Man is governed by entities he has never even heard of, let alone understands.

When the average person uses the word "mind-boggling" to describe someone else's behaviour, what they are actually stating is that they find it baffling why everyone in the world isn't like them.

Those incapable of love, cannot live.

We are usually grateful for what we have, never for what we are not.

You have to let the fools be fools, and hope they figure it out themselves.

You don't walk naked up a city street because it is your reaction to being seen by other human beings - they observe you and you respond appropriately given the context. But what if your reaction to being observed by humans is something else - what if it is madness in the form of schizophrenia.

It is easy to make crazy decisions in life if you pay no price for them at all.

The unintelligent of society, despite their education, talk in clichés, hyperbole and blanket statements. But the most important word in that sentence is "talk."

Time waits for no one.

You can only make the system good for every single person on earth by ultimately destroying it.

You get an education not to impress people, but to not have to do things you don't want to do.

There are some roads in life you shouldn't go down.

Most of the time when they say "this changes everything," nothing changes at all.

What everyone is fated to discover is just how unkind time is.

We don't care about war unless it is in our own backyard.

You cannot improve yourself if you hate the other side.

Even if the leader could with the snap of his fingers make society perfect, it wouldn't be enough for the mob.

What money has done to man is make him seek it even if it means billions must suffer.

Sometimes there is not much you can do for one, nor a culture.

The reason you hate the successful is because you have been conditioned to.

The world won't end, but human civilization may.

With every revolution, some win, some lose, but for the majority nothing changes.

Everyone seems to have solutions for society, but not for themselves.

Everyone has their version of paradise, none of which would yield it.

Those with opinion don't allow for the variance of the world.

There is nearly 9 billion people on the planet, so the probability is high that at least one of them will have an opinion that contradicts yours.

Through your opinion you validate your own importance. That is why you shouldn't have one.

If only there was some medication to treat the possessed. The pharmaceutical industry would make trillions out of it.

Does innovation lead to extinction? That is the question for any intelligent species.

I don't have the solutions for utopia, no one does.

I despise those that use the phrase: "It is that simple." It is usually never as simple as they believe it to be.

We remember more the friends that stayed silent, than the enemies that belittled us.

I know you hate them, but look at where the ultra rich vote, that is the truth. The ultra rich have so much money they can be true to themselves. The middle and poor classes cannot.

Never doubt the good mans proclivity to punish.

What is to be done in life must be done alone.

You have to go where it is dark, where the light of humanity has never been.

We side with cancel culture when it goes after those we dislike.

Between two executioners, man always chooses the one whose axe falls hardest. That is why so many are forced to align themselves with the woke cult of present.

If you are going to take advantage of others for your own gain, make sure its the idiots, because there are plenty of them.

The first thing the cult does is give you someone to blame.

The world is tiny, as the guilty discover.

Both sides are lying to you - not just the side you oppose.

If you give the insane too many freedoms, eventually they take over the asylum.

It is not necessary to defend each perpetrator, but it is to understand them.

It is much harder in life to be a saint than to be a sinner. This is not well understood.

Those raised properly in poverty have better outcomes than rich raised by the fist.

The stupid get the intellectuals they deserve.

One seldom understands just how much of a cliché they are.

The one good thing about the apocalypse is that it will treat us all equally.

The smart man has an answer to the question at hand - the wise man knows whether to answer at all.

If you can get a good nights sleep you should count yourself lucky.

There is a reason we all get married and have two children, and its not because we want to be happy.

When it is your time to go, it will not be pretty.

In times of trouble there is no shortage of "experts" who have the "solutions."

If you want everything to be perfect, you will be disappointed every minute of existence.

Those that cannot forgive are the easiest to manipulate by the propaganda.

If you cannot stop having an opinion, then you cannot also stop being propagandized.

The technology of your time is what limits you.

Nothing controls a man like the word "congratulations." That is what he lives for, to be told in life.

Every beginning has the ending it deserves.

You will discover one day in hindsight, that life is easier when no one knows who you are.

The ego centrical don't realize how many people exist in the world - they think there is only one.

If you think you are an expert, you haven't learnt much.

History tends to be on the side of the hangman.

The average individual has very poor insight into actually how stupid they are.

It is as though one does not have a memory at all because the crime of today is considered the worse crime of all time. And yet, next week there will be another crime that takes precedence, and the one last week is forgotten.

The man that is sure he is right, cannot grow.

The man with imagination cannot be imprisoned.

Those in power are never to your satisfaction, and those that want power market themselves as though they will be, when they wont. The election will not change much.

The world is problems - deal with it.

A crisis is never shy of its "experts."

Everything you hear is an opinion.

It is much easier to conquer other lands than yourself.

The brainwashed cannot even admit to their condition let alone try to change it. If they do, they get cancelled. In the insane society, its not the mad that get sectioned.

Too much freedom is as dangerous as none of it.

What you will discover on your deathbed is that nothing matters.

That it is so easy for the mob to criticize, also means if the conditions are right, that it is easy to make them adore.

The solution to a long life is to know what you will commit suicide because of.

Even the saints must pay price for their choices. If you go one way, you lose another way. A cost cannot be avoided.

You cannot make everyone happy - at best all you can do is take sides.

What is more frightening than being dead? Only being alive forever.

You can behave impeccably in life and then let your guard down once and your life is changed forever. It takes two minutes to cut a tree that took thirty years to grow.

Ones adoration is clichéd, but also their outrage. They are the two sides of the same coin in how the population is controlled.

You are who you agree with.

Are you are holder of an opinion or a slave to it? The weak cannot but help express themselves.

The rebel is seldom supported, but often he or she is the saint.

Every idiot has his blueprint for utopia.

It is loss that teaches us the best things in life.

If you think everything should be perfect, then you are going to date person after person after person and change job after job after job.

To defy the mob is to not be ignorant, but there is a good chance you starve in such a scenario.

Being stupid is your prerogative.

If you expect everyone to agree with you, then they are not going to be very truthful.

There is no utopia without a terribly brutality.

The man that has nothing to lose has nothing to live for.

A horse isn't afraid of what other horses on the farm think of him. Humans are afraid of what other humans think of them. A human being seen by another human is different from that of animals - humans can label, that is stigmatize. You could run through a forest naked and come across all types of animals - deer, foxes, rabbits etc. But it's only when you are seen by another human being that you will cover yourself up.

Everyone that has ever existed, has their own version of utopia, none of which would work, instead they would just give birth to different problems.

One must always remember that they are dealing with a population that cannot see the universe. Alas all they understand is approval.

Most would rather be poor and approved than anything else.

The free are more imprisoned than they are wiling to concede.

To the ignorant its only others that resort to crime.

Maturity is the tact of being able to disagree with someone and not want them shot because of it.

The conservatives want it done their way, as do the liberals, but there is no right nor wrong way in society, you still get a flawed culture, regardless of what way you do it.

How can there be peace in society, when half of it wants the other half slaughtered.

You desire to live in a society where you have rights. Then you must also afford your enemies the very same privileges.

All I can say is that holder of an opinion is not as correct as he believes himself to be.

We were all stupid once, just as we were young. But youth is forgiven, stupidity not as much.

The biggest delusion that most suffer is that society should be perfect.

Look at the stars - every dot of light is your motivation to go on.

You cannot be a proponent of free speech and want others silenced.

There are always two fools - the fool and those that follow him.

Society is a cesspit and always will be. This is most difficult for the ignorant to comprehend.

What one must always fear is the lack thereof.

Every generation has its person to blame.

To listen and to hear are two radically different things.

Who is more delusional - the politician who says he can change everything or the voter that expects him to?

It is easier for the ignorant to give advice rather than apply it to themselves.

Outrage is the one guarantee of the ignorant.

The man that says there are no solutions, doesn't make much money. That is why there are so few of them.

If the intellectual can get you to kneel before him, what else might he be able to get you to do?

The vulnerable cannot help but express their opinion.

Its better to be fed in prison than be starving and free.

Opinion makes you stupid.

You will be astounded at just how cruel good people can be.

The problem with shipping off to the East those you don't approve of, is they eventually come for those you do approve of.

Most are unwilling to accept how ignorant they are.

Rights are seldom given, they must be earned or won, and usually at the expense of someone else.

If there are no repercussions, there is no end to the crime.

Those that cannot accept being wrong are also societies most violent.

It doesn't matter which side you choose, what path you go down, enemies will be made.

Those with opinions are easily manipulated by those that share them.

It is impossible to be on the side of all of societies executioners. Between two gods, one must be the devil.

One assumes when denigrating the famous, that if they were in their position, they would be universally loved, which is false. They would be as hated as the famous are.

You are always in the process of discovery - ever the student, ever the learner.

The standard ideologue, be they liberal or conservative, believes to their core that they have all the solutions to society, and that if you just did it their way, utopia is feasible. The reality is that everyone could be conservative or they all could be liberal and you would still have problems in the resultant society.

If we were immortal we would all die by suicide.

Sometimes the only path to forgiveness is through suicide.

The population is manipulated by things they don't even know exist, let alone understand.

Money only makes you less anxious, not happy.

Society is never short of its "experts."

What it boils down to is you are their job and just a number.

The highest knowledge one can attain is to know what will kill them before it does.

It is mostly when we are in a good mood that we betray ourselves.

What you do has consequences, what you don't do even more so.

Every innovation brings with it its own dystopia.

The assault on our common sense, our sanity, is the one we least understand.

Get out of both the liberal and conservative movements - just watch from afar the lunatics killing each other.

We are all saints, or at least we are busy trying to be one. But one mans martyr is another mans sinner.

It is not what you believe, but rather look at the consequences of deviating from the party line. That is what motivates you.

Most think they are right, not weak, and that is why they are easily manipulated.

A society that demands perfection, gets tyranny instead.

Those willing to adore, get the scammers they deserve.

You don't decide the ideology - it decides you.

Wisdom is only discovered on the other side of certainty. If you are sure you are right, you are ignorant.

You must understand that the victim is not set in stone - the victim to one is the perpetrator to another.

Rights for one nearly always means a lack of them for another.

One is neither as good or bad as you believe them to be - they are something in-between, that is they are human.

Choices we make today often come to a head decades later.

People will happily go against themselves to go for their ideology.

The healthy society is when the two are killing each other. The unhealthy society is when only one is killing the other.

You are not wrong. But you are not right either. To be less ignorant is to understand this duality.

Everyone has people that love them, including those we despise.

The irony of wishing to create a safe society through the genocide of millions.

When you take away one dystopia, you don't get a utopia, just a different unexpected dystopia.

One seldom realizes the healthy society. One knows when a culture is bad, but not when its as good as can be.

Ambition without restraint is a most terrible thing.

It is only through extreme violence that insanity can become public policy.

Both sides are insane. Both sides are flawed. Both sides are violent.

What follows excessive hubris is not pretty.

The most dangerous men are those too dumb to have shame.

Respect must be demanded for those who give up their lives for freedom.

It is most stressful for the repressed to try to be on the side of the hangman on all matters.

What is certain is that you will have to take sides, not that either side is correct.

To torture the torturer doesn't make you virtuous.

Everyone in society is safe, or no one is.

The weak of society cannot forgive.

You never 100 percent agree with someone else on all matters unless they have a loaded gun pressed against your forehead, literally or figuratively.

If the whole world despised us, we would not care. But what hurts the most is friends who turn their back to us.

If you have a mortgage to service, you tend to be a nice person.

There are violent brutalists on either side of the political divide.

To the idiot the solutions to the problem at hand are always simple.

With advancement technology wise eventually it will become a crime to be known.

Our true marriage is to that of our community. A relationship is a by-product of that.

The rich are so poor that all they have is money.

Hateful thoughts lead to hateful words which leads to hateful actions.

Youth must always be willing to challenge authority.

If it makes your life more difficult, it isn't worth it.

Good times quite often ruin us.

If everyone demands happiness, then few actually get it.

A country cannot murder its way into a utopia.

None of the possessed ever describe themselves as feeble.

Every good man is one bad decision away from suicide.

The powerful are usually banqueting rather than listening.

We all are very enthusiastic about cheering on the hangman, until it's our neck in the noose.

What is society? Its simple really, when you give to one person, you must take from someone else. A price is to be paid regardless of what path you go.

The ignorant person believes to their core that there should be no mistakes, no scandals and no tragedy in society.

Every paradise has its gulag.

The only individual without error is one who has never existed before.

Its very foolish to argue with fools.

Until you learn how prudent you must be in life, you haven't learnt much.

When everyone is trying to be good, to be on the side of the executioners, it only creates a volatile culture.

When you chase incredible success, you must allow for horrible failure.

Death must be accepted, but it is nice to live.

A united country must have a common enemy.

Fools are emotional, that is why they cannot be relied upon.

"Experience teaches only the teachable." Aldous Huxley.

Those that learn nothing learn how to die.

Opinion prevents you from maturing. Opinion is ego, it is narcissism, it is condescension, because through possessing one you assume you are right, and that those who contradict you, well they must be wrong. This is the problem with the group, because when in one, you are forced to adopt an opinion, which keeps you ignorant. The smartest people are always those that keep quiet, that is they accept that perhaps they could be wrong.

One seldom succeeds in life without making their life more difficult.

People, without being cognizant of it, can be so cruel.

If you are anti-government, then you are anti-society, for there is no society without its leaders.

When man is anxious he will seek reassurance from even the devil.

If all you do is remember facts, you prevent yourself from thinking.

The future is coming and none of us are in his plans.

Most people are very unlucky because not even in their life time does it cross their mind that they could actually be wrong.

The war between the conservatives and the liberals has no end because both believe to their core they are right.

The surest way to be despised is to be popular with the opposite sex.

"If only they did it my way," you sigh. But things are never as easy as your way, that I can assure you.

There is no right, but one must convey facts to make money in life.

Sometimes the worst thing that can happen a man is he is remembered.

That one cannot help but have an opinion means that they cannot help but be delusional.

You agree with what doesn't get you executed, regardless of whether it is being cancelled or shot.

Being cancelled is effectively the same as being lined up before the firing squad.

In times of crisis people need to have faith in the institutions even more.

When you start looking for meaning in it all, the danger is you get radicalized.

Pay no attention to what the poor believe for they have a loaded gun pointing at their head. Instead look at what those who are not in debt believe.

Life is hard, but yet it must go on.

So you dream of success - don't we all. And it is always a question of what you are willing to sacrifice to attain it.

It is very hard for the gambler to understand we don't live in an ideal world - that is that it is the nature of the gambler mentality to expect a utopia.

Even god is destined to become irrelevant.

We are all willing to dish out the life changing advice, just never to ourselves.

To the idealists, heaven on earth is attainable. To the realists, it's case of what poison you are willing to swallow.

We all have our principles, until we haven't eaten in three days.

Outrage is the most cliched aspect of man.

Idealism is the tyrants fantasy.

There is no dream life - its a question of what suffering you are willing to endure.

Those that risk their lives for freedom are seldom thanked.

The greatest enemy to a tyrant is always another one.

From language and eyesight combined comes mankind's unique ability to cast judgement, that is to stigmatize. No other animal can stigmatize and I wonder if intelligent AI systems will or will not stigmatize other intelligent AI systems.

To possess an opinion is to side with the executioners.

The holder of an opinion is blind to their own brutality.

It takes so much maturity to forgive and that is why most cannot.

One assumes that we should inhabit this dystopian society where everything is perfect. They cannot see that society is flawed. They expect to live in a society where the news stations go out of business - that is how stupid their thinking is.

There is no utopia, and even if there was they would outlaw it, because it would damage their interests.

What is wrong with society tends to reverberate - what is good about it, not as much.

A problem with society is those with vocal opinions are the ones who should not have them.

A society without its stigmatized would be terrible for it.

It is quite ironic that all the hate in war comes from those not on the battlefield.

In nature species exist at the expense of others. Human societies are similar.

Society is full of "experts," so perhaps those to listen to are the ones who say nothing.

Who actually profits - the prophet or his followers!

The only way you get safe streets is if they are empty, which is a crime in itself.

Could one do better? Probably yes. But we all could do better, and without achieving perfection.

We are replaceable at work but invaluable to those that cherish us.

The purpose of stigma is to control those that consider themselves free.

What the honest intellectual does is try to make one think - that is to see beyond their cult called society. When you gain wisdom, loneliness is its cost.

There is no path you go down in life that doesn't have some sort of pain with it.

To not choose is a choice and often the worst.

Even if the government did everything possible, it still would not be good for the voter.

The solution to making millions is to provide solutions that have no possibility of working.

We would have to be imprisoned for an eternity in order to truly value our freedom.

Those in power are more afraid of children learning than they are of them dying.

When most see past the scam, that only means loads will fall for it.

Most of daily life amounts to picking sides.

To succeed you must be interested in things, not people.

No one asks to be born into this world, so once thrust into it, it is up to us to find our own purpose, that is what we are willing to suffer for.

Three days - that is your motivation - three days without eating that is.

The darkness in us is merely a reflection of the darkness around us.

If everyone has their own version of utopia, then as a consequence there is no such thing.

Every path has its own unique pain.

If you don't want to be the next Josef Stalin, then you must allow for the unpredictability, the uncertainty, the mistakes, the lack of an ideal society.

You must accept one thing: there is no such thing as the ideal society. And there never will be.

Man's two wisest teachers are devotion and curiosity.

The bureaucratic society treats people as numbers and not as humans.

The sanctimonious least of all understand just how easy it is for it to all go wrong in life.

So many don't understand that it is possible to regret enormous success.

So many assume that perfection is just a change away.

If you left justice to the fools, someone who littered would be tortured to death.

Have you ever noticed that anything that goes against the heterosexual unit is labelled negatively by society. This is society protecting itself.

There is no world where everyone is denied being unlucky.

One must be willing to kill, to kill to live that is.

Very few notice that no matter what politician is voted in, all of them are eventually declared as incompetent.

Every culture has its idiots. Its gets dangerous when one of them attains power.

Conduct yourself as though you are just about to be led out to the firing squad.

The brainwashed are absolutely convinced, to the point of delusion in a psychiatric hospital, that they have the solutions for society.

The similarity between good luck and bad luck is that most never get to choose them.

If you want to know what is true, look at the ultra wealthy's stance. The poor given their financial circumstance cannot speak the truth - only the rich can.

Everyone has their own version of utopia, which also means they have their own genocide to achieve it.

The standard idiot cannot accept that which does not go his way.

The only thing worse than an idiot is an idiot with an opinion.

What you want to attain in life is a considerable amount of money such that you can diverge from the mobs thinking.

To punish the criminal isn't always the virtuous action.

If you want to mature, stop having an opinion. Accept that perhaps you are an idiot that is brainwashed.

There is no utopia - someone profits at the expense of someone else - someone is approved at the expense of someone else - someone doesn't pay the price that someone else will.

There is no society where everyone has it good in life, such that there would be no need for the Marxist doctrine. That you will always have wealth inequality, you will also always have the outraged liberals, who control each other and punish severely he or she who contradicts the philosophy of the age. For example, if you work in a coffee shop and retirement is 30/40 years away, you must then go along with the madness of the liberal cult. If you don't, if you choose to defy them, then no one will go into your coffee shop and you will be homeless. Thus you instinctively concur with the delusions - if they say the sky is green, then you will goddamn well believe it to be green also.

In the mad society, it's the sane that get hanged.

Does one side with the executed or the executioner? Well if one is in debt, it's obvious who it will be.

The greatest insult to one is to exclaim you know why they are delusional.

There is someone on the other side of your country, who unlike you believes the opposite, but like you can never accept being wrong.

The most brutal war is always one that is personal.

Most of our mistakes come when we are in a good mood.

We are not just married to our partner but also to morality, to doing the right thing, even at great expense to ourselves.

You could do it an infinite ways, but each one requires difficult decisions.

People behave irrationally. To find some solace in life you must accept this.

When it comes to the march, the rich can afford to stay at home, the poor cannot.

To be honest means to fall short in the eyes of so many.

The irrational mind is the only certainty in society.

To be normal is the price you pay for approval.

Those that flourish in crowds are empty when alone.

One month you hate the intellectual. The next month you love him. But it is he who gets paid in both months.

There is no utopia without its own genocide.

We always agree with the punishment handed down to our enemies. But what when its our allies in the firing line?

If you cannot accept that you are incredibly weak and subject to manipulation, you will never gain the higher ground.

Difficult decisions are unavoidable in life. It is a question of what poison you want to swallow.

The mob only has two emotions - to adore or to despise.

Very few men understand just how cruel they can be.

The poor worry about their next meal - the rich about how happy they are - the middle class about what their neighbour thinks of them.

What we all share in common is that we are destined to discover just how unkind time is.

If you are going to play dice, it's best not to do it with the devil.

The imprisonment of society can best summed up by the few that are willing to cross the picket line. Most cannot.

When you are dying of a terminal illness, you will tragically learn how to live.

In the dystopia, everyone is corrupt except the corrupted, that is anyone except those that wear the crown.

The ignorant believe society should be flawless and this mentality is what makes them be suckered in by the intellectual that promises it.

What the holocaust demonstrates is that if enough people are in agreement, the most brutal and perverse acts can be normalized and rationalized.

You'd be surprized how many expect 100% adherence to the law, and for those that break it, to be punished severely. For example, someone makes an honest error when driving, something we all have done - well so many think justice is for the person to be imprisoned. What I am getting at is that we are much more close to the devil than to the saints.

Those who are most ripe to be propagandized are the ones that don't know what propaganda is.

You are who you choose to adore.

There is no end to people giving out about what's wrong with society, because lecturing people about what is right about it doesn't make them as much money.

How does one make lots of money in this world? Well you tell them there is a problem and that you and only you possesses the solution - you must present yourself as their saviour.

It is amazing how many there are whose instinct is to punish, rather than understand, let alone forgive.

Through their opinion one is blind to their own ignorance.

One is sure, that if only they were in charge of it all, we would live in a utopia.

The average person denies how cruel they could be.

We may have our differences but we both see the same stars.

So many become their tormentors.

One would rather persist in delusion than accept they are afraid. They always choose the lesser evil, which is their survival given the context, and quickly forget that it is evil.

If you want to know what is true look at what the extremely wealthy do, for those in debt are not in the position of contradicting the hangman.

There is no insanity in society without its own brutality for those that dare defy it.

If you stand to lose everything you will believe anything.

The individual complains about Elon Musk or Bill Gates, and yet that same individual donates a huge portion of his disposable income to sports stars. What's the difference!

If you are not a saint when you die, you must have done something terrible in your life.

The commoners, be they saints or sinners, must never be the ones dishing out justice.

It is binary to most - either they approve 100% or they disprove 100%. The idol is either the greatest person in history or the worst, when in reality they are in-between, as we all are.

If only the mob could understand before they judged.

Usually the "prophets" that suggest this and that to cure society's ills are only interested in one thing - money.

The future is always on the way.

Self-betrayal is always the worst kind.

Those that expect an equitable world are always very disappointed by what they have given birth to.

Wars are not won on threats, but results.

The words "I love" and "I hate" are overused in the political landscape by those that get taken advantage of. There is no "I love" without its own "I hate."

There is no such thing as half a liberal. If you are part of the liberal movement you must believe in whatever is the delusion of the month, even if you don't agree with it. The same can be said of the conservatives. There is no such thing as half a brainwashed individual - there is only the brainwashed and the sane.

Nothing is ever as simple as simple.

If only you could accept your own ignorance, wisdom is there to be claimed.

It is not a question of what system is most perfect, but which one has the least problems.

A society that was perfect, without crime, would be so brutal, it would be your worst nightmare.

There is no short cut to gratitude.

If we couldn't hate, we could never in return love.

The ignorant are disappointed with the world every day that it isn't perfect.

Diane Warren is the best songwriter alive, one of the best ever and the best female songwriter of all time. And she never got married and had three kids. If she did, you don't get her songs, as her output decreases by 80 percent. So you have a choice to make - lots of money and success, or a family, because you cannot have both.

It is as Thomas Sowell said, a question of what problems you are willing to indulge. Do you want to live in a society where someone breaks the speed limit on the motorway and gets away with it? Or do you want to live in a society where that same someone is caught and shipped off to a labour camp in "The East" to serve a thirty year sentence? The answer is obvious if you understand history. So you have to accept that the dear generous world in which you live in isn't perfect and has flaws.

It is our choices that kill us.

Your main task should be to become a better person.

There are no easy choices - its nearly always a case of choosing the lesser evil given the context.

Low prices have a terrible cost.

What do you want to happen for you to finally be happy, to finally give up giving out? It is not possible other than the genocide of everyone that doesn't agree with you.

A world where no one commits a crime, where there is no need for news stations, that is perfect, would be the most dystopian civilization of all.

Change is growths condition.

The stupidest people are always the ones you know. The most intelligent people in contrast are so private you don't even know they exist. Whilst the dumb liberals and conservatives are at war with each other, the smart people profit from this battle.

History repeats itself every three days.

When you are in debt, you are also not in a position to say what you believe.

It's impossible to bow to all executioners.

We cannot remember what we did three days ago, but we do remember who shunned us ten years ago. That is society in a nutshell.

Men are seldom forgiven. That is why they commit suicide.

If everyone is either all good or a devil, that is the type of binary thinking dictators possess.

The future is coming and you are not in his plans.

If Karl Marx fully believed his philosophy would yield utopia, he is either the biggest idiot that ever existed or its biggest charlatan.

The secret to a long life is to commit to something other than your great self.

You are extremely fortunate if you get to live in life - most battle to stay alive.

The stupid assume that if everyone just followed every rule in society, it would be perfect.

If you listened to the ordinary person they would send away for life someone who littered the paths. That is why justice must never be left to them. When justice is left to the fools you get a police state.

Man's opinion is the most clichéd aspect of him.

When we have lost our way, we tend to run faster.

If one lives by the mantra report-the-neighbours-to-the-authorities, eventually they will come for you. You don't want to live in a society where every mistake is heavily punished.

It is very difficult to realize, let alone accept, that one does not hold a monopoly on the truth.

It's amazing how many "good people" think you can law a society into utopia - that if you just report every single indiscretion, the result is that you make society better. If you are such a person, go over to North Korea and live there instead. In a healthy society mistakes are made.

One does not have the time in modern society to critically think. They work half the day and tend to their families the other half. Then they go to sleep for six or seven hours. Thus they just casually accept what they see, hear and read in the media. They take this to be fact because they are restricted from questioning it as they are so busy. Understandably, they would rather not starve than think.

The Marxist dream is that if you could redistribute all the wealth in the world to everyone, society would be perfect. This is wrong.

There are no solutions, only trade-offs. A decision for something is always a decision against something else. You cannot make the whole of society happy - all you can do is choose a side.

Until you accept that you don't know much, you don't know anything at all.

True knowledge is to call yourself an idiot once a day. You are not right and not everyone in the whole world has to agree with you.

Life is good until it isn't.

When there are no wolves, then the sheep must fear each other.

Everyone has mistakes to their name, but not everyone is famous.

Either side has its madness, so its really a question of what insanity you are willing to swallow.

Legality is not always a guide for morality.

Paradoxically, the indicator of a decent childhood is ungratefulness.

Having an opinion is the most clichéd thing of all.

Those that don't understand stigma are condemned to be manipulated by it.

If approval were a drug it would be heroin. And maturity is akin to opiate withdrawal. That's why we prefer approval to wisdom.

If you have grown men willing to kill each other over who's football team is better, what other foolish acts will they be capable of.

It's much better to be the hangman than the hanged - this is how cults function.

When the king goes to war he doesn't go himself.

To go right by one person or group, is to go wrong by someone or some other group. Thus society can never be equitable.

Society advances and never ceases advancing.

Violence is often cyclical - the tortured becomes the torturer.

There is the best society to live in, but never the perfect one.

So many, more than they would be willing to accept, believe that the path to utopia is through the genocide of half the population.

All groups are cults. But when you have millions of people mimicking whatever madness you believe in, you tend not to admit that you are in one.

To save one part of society, another part of it must be sacrificed.

The crimes of the sinner sells more papers than the virtues of the saint.

What we crave today becomes indifferent tomorrow.

Very few are lucky enough to know what they will regret.

You cannot create beauty through focusing on a terrible past.

A society is often so obsessed as to whether it can, that it never stops to think about whether it should.

How often has it been that the perfect citizen is also its worst!

The line between good and evil cuts right through the heart of us all.

When the end justifies the means, then nothing is considered illegitimate.

When you dare to choose, you must also by default dare to be responsible.

You should hate the choices one makes, not the person.

We never see both the good and bad in one - they are to us either all good or all bad.

The assumption behind criticizing the politicians is that those criticizing would do a better job of it were they in charge. This is false.

What is most difficult for the stupid to understand is that society isn't perfect.

If changing politicians actually changed anything then it would be against the law to.

It is a terrible feeling, to want to run away but have nowhere to go.

When will you learn that you will never get the society you want.

Every plague has its opportunity.

How often has it been that a culture's most obedient is also its cruellest.

You are not going to accomplish utopia, you must understand this. So what can you do? The best is to think differently than how most do.

One agrees with whatever doesn't get them executed.

The End.
